U. S. Boycott Is Threatened NRA Slackers

"Big Stick" to Be Used to Assure Success of Campaign.

Officers Hope Volunteers Will Preclude Need for Drastic Action.

By J. Bernard McDonnell.

The United States Government itself is going to boycott those industries which refuse to fall or join the march toward economic recovery.

Not even monopolistic and essential industries will be permitted to stand unchallenged in the way of the administration's recovery program.

Use of the big stick of punitive power reposed in the President and the National Industrial Recovery Administration is said to have been discussed yesterday by the so-called super-Cabinet and at other conferences between officials charged with responsibility for the success of the gigantic economic program.

The administration is anxious to persuade business and industrial executives to join voluntarily. Officials have been careful not to display too openly the big stick. Nothing official has been said publicly about the limits to which the Government will go.

Expresses "Belief."

Brig. Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, national recovery administrator, yesterday announced a "belief" which indicated the extent to which the discussions have gone.

"I don't believe the United States Government itself will buy anything from any industry which does not come under the Blue Eagle and does not observe the code prescribed," Gen. Johnson said.

The question was raised by the statement of Robert P. Lamont, head of the American Iron and Steel Institute, who said he believed the steel industry had gone as far as it would go in submitting its code.

Studying Steel Code.

The steel code is under study by Gen. Johnson's aids. It is almost certain to be changed. Some of the expected changes are not likely to please the financial, industrial and business leaders interested.

The power of the Government lies in the authority of the President to prescribe a code of his own drafting for any industry, hold public hearings and declare the code effective. Those concerns which observed the code would be licensed to operate. Those which did not would not be licensed and would have to shut down.

Asked whether he had talked with "the top" about the Government boycott, Gen. Johnson, who had earlier disavowed the use of the word "boycott," said:

"I never talk with 'the top.' But I have talked with lots of Government officials about it."

Johnson himself deprecated talk of the thousands of employers who have signed pledges to observe the President's temporary volunteer blanket code pending approval of specific codes.

"The really important thing," he said, "is not how many sign the pledges. The important thing is how many comply."

A check is soon to be started and those signers who are flaunting the blue eagle but are not living up to requirements will have the emblem

Syria-Iraq Fight Takes 115 Lives

Assyrian Christians Still Battling Frontier Army Forces.

Baghdad, Iraq, Aug. 8 (AP).—Fierce fighting between Assyrian Christians and the Iraq frontier army on the Syrian-Iraq border took more than 100 lives over the week-end, and still was in progress today. The Assyrians recently left their territory in Iraq and crossed into Syria.

Casualties thus far have been on the Iraq side, 20 dead and 45 wounded, while the Assyrians lost 95 dead and an undetermined number of wounded.

The cause of the trouble was stated to be dissatisfaction among the Assyrians with the arrangements made when the British mandate over Iraq was terminated.

Polish Fliers Hurt In Test Hop Crash

Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, Aug. 8 (AP).—Struck by a heavy gust of wind, the White Eagle monoplane of the Polish-American fliers Benjamin and Joseph Adamowicz, upset here this afternoon as it came to a landing after a "test" flight from New York.

The Adamowicz brothers and their companion and assistant pilot, Emil Birgen, were shaken up in the crash which damaged the plane's under carriage.

A cut on Joseph Adamowicz's arm required several stitches.

Visibly disturbed by the turn of affairs, the brothers said they had no definite plans regarding the crossing of the Atlantic.

Power Project National Plan To Be Drawn

(Associated Press.)

Drafting a National plan for power development will be undertaken at once by the Power Commission under a $400,000 allocation yesterday by the Public Works Administration.

From the same fund, the commission will make a detailed study of costs of power transmission, an important factor in rate making.

Both inquiries were ordered by the Senate last session in a resolution by Senator Costigan (Democrat), Colorado, but funds were not available from regular sources and could only be provided from the public works appropriation.

Value Unknown.

The Power Commission, in announcing it would begin the work immediately, said the full value of the Nation's economic resources had not been secured because of the absence of a National plan. A statement by the Public Works Administration said:

"The Federal Power Commission points out that up to the present time the development of the water power resources of the United States, both public and private, has been carried on without reference to any comprehensive or integrated national plan.

"As a result there have been many instances in which the full economic and social value of the Nation's resources have not been secured. In other cases there has been a lack of proper coordination between projects developed in the same region.

Economic Loss.

"Power projects have also sometimes been developed without proper regard for the available market to consume the electricity generated. The failure to develop a national power program has therefore resulted in great economic loss."

Power commission officials indicated their investigation, which will be on a regional basis to make it as broad as possible, will take in all typical communities. In addition to large cities their study will also embrace rural, suburban and small city power enterprises.

Survey Important.

The determination of facts with regard to costs of transmitting and distributing electricity is considered important by power commission officials since transmission and distribution expenditures figure heavily in establishment of rates by State power commissions.

An investigation of these facts also is considered valuable in determining the economic feasibility of proposed power projects.

Ecuadorean Army Tells Of Bribe Plot by Rebels

Quito, Ecuador, Aug. 8 (U.P.).—Police were advised today by various groups of the Ecuadorean army of attempts to bribe them to join a proposed revolution, which was to have started today. More than 20 persons were arrested and documents were said to have been found on some of the prisoners incriminating Col. Luis Larrea Alba as chief of the plot.

Orders were issued for the arrest of Mayor Burban of Quito, who was reported to have left suddenly for the north. Larrea Alba was also said to have fled the city with his secretary and family.

Noted Show Boat Auctioned for $20

New Orleans, Aug. 8 (AP).—The Mississippi River's famous showboat, Cotton Blossom, was knocked down under the auctioneer's hammer today for $20.

Public sale of the romantic old boat which brought sunshine and melodrama to the interior towns of Southern States for years, brought only one bid.

It gave possession of the boat to Clarence Stanley, of Baton Rouge, who said he would renovate the vessel for a theatrical comeback. The auction was under a Federal court judgment to satisfy a towing claim of more than $100.

Thomas Finds Peril in "War" Within Regime

Senator Holds Recovery Army Is Battling With Federal Reserve.

By John J. Daly.

In an analysis of the present situation, Senator Thomas pictures three allied forces of the recovery act fighting against the Federal Reserve Board.

"Secretary of Agriculture Wallace," the Senator said, "is trying to increase commodity prices—notably cotton and wheat.

"Some other part of the administration is out to put up the price of oil.

Johnson vs. Reserve.

"The Federal Reserve System is doing the exact opposite of all these forces, yet seemingly working with them.

The senator explained the battle scene in this fashion:

"It is an old law of economics that the scarcer things are the dearer they are. Therefore, in order to advance the price of cotton the Agricultural Department has the farmers take out of cultivation so many million acres. Scarcity of product, higher prices. The same with wheat and corn. The same with oil.

"Sniping at Recovery."

"All right. These things are bought with money—another commodity. The Federal Reserve Board in making money scarce is actually sniping at the recovery program. The exact opposite plan would bring about more money, needed to buy the commodities. More money is needed."

As the Senator sees it, the whole program is defeating its own purpose. So far, he says, the only people who have any money are the brewers and the allied brewing in-

Rotterdam, Aug. 8 (AP).—Recognition of Soviet Russia by the Netherlands government was understood today to be included in the terms of a commercial treaty for which negotiations were recently initiated at the Hague.

U.S. Jobs Due Thousands in New Projects

More Than Offset Losses Through Dismissals; Hiring Is Gradual.

Civil Service Group Gets Preference in Works Set-Up Here.

By Robert C. Albright.

Gradual opening up of thousands of Federal jobs under new Government emergency projects, more than counterbalancing recent Washington dismissals, was forecast here yesterday in two official quarters.

From Secretary of Interior Ickes came word that the Washington Public Works set-up, now employing only 200 workers, would expand slowly over a period of months to more than 2,000, with ousted Civil Service employes getting preference.

The Navy Department, under fire from organized labor because of pay cuts under the new Navy 5-day week order, disclosed that some 2,200 workers would be added to the local Navy yard's present force of 3,800 within a year.

Dry Agents Affected.

These announcements failed to overshadow significance of an Executive order indirectly "unblanketing" between 1,200 and 1,800 employes of the reorganized Prohibition Service, transferred to the Justice Department's new division of investigation, effective tomorrow. The order was construed as another blow at the merit systems.

Approximately 600 prohibition agents may lose their jobs permanently under the transfer. The rest, automatically separated from the service, will be rehired under schedule A, of the Civil Cervice rules, an excepted classification, removed from their old civil service status, it was learned.

The order bears out forecasts in The Post that recent removal of a block of Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce employes from competitive civil service status was the first of what promised to be a series of unblanketings.

Curtailment Slowed.

Reorganization of the Prohibition Bureau's investigatory functions under a new division of investigation, is only one phase of the President's once extensive Federal reorganization program slated to go into effect tomorrow.

Postponements and modifications have so eased the blow, however, that the major part of the program will be spread over a period of eight months. Immediate curtailments in personnel will be moderate, and only $5,000,000 of the once estimated $25,000,000 savings will be realized at once.

Secretary Ickes suggested 2,000 as a rough estimate of the number of public works employes who eventually will be taken on here. In line with the President's reemployment policy, he said ousted workers listed on the Civil Service Commission's reemployment rolls, would be the first choice. He indicated all would be quartered in the

Wave Kills 7 Orphans on Bar

New York, Aug. 8 (U. P.).—A huge wave swept in from the ocean upon a swarm of orphan boys and girls frolicking on a sandbar today and when it had crashed beyond to the shore, seven were lost in the foaming wake.

One body was recovered, that of Raymond Evans, 10, but six were missing—apparently drawn out by the suction of an undertow that imperiled a score of other bathers.

The children, inmates of the Prince of Judea home of Brooklyn, were taken to the beach at Edgemere, Long Island, for a holiday as reward for good conduct and scholastic accomplishment. Fifteen waded at low tide to a bar about 75 feet from shore. A deepening gully separated the sandbar from the beach.

A stiff breeze piled waves in upon the sandbar. Suddenly one wave much larger than the others was seen foaming upon the orphan group.

It thundered upon the children, swept across the gully and up the beach. Bathers standing in shallow water were knocked down.

Lifeguards saw heads bobbing in the rolling water between the beach and the sandbar. Hysterical cries for help mingled with orders of the lifeguards as boats were launched and strong swimmers plunged to the rescue of the drowning orphans.

Dancers Adopt Code And New "Nira" Step

New York, Aug. 8 (AP).—The Dancing Masters of America, Inc., representing some 1,000 schools of stage and ballroom dancing, signed the Recovery Administration's blanket code today and claimed the honor of being the first professional group to do so.

Coat Was Put on After He Was Slain, Police Learn.

New York, Aug. 8 (AP).—The search for the slayers of Henry F. Sanborn, socially prominent Eastern representative of the Frisco Lines, was pushed tonight along three main lines:

1. Police found a pistol in Sanborn's lodgings in a Y. M. C. A branch and sought to learn what connection it had, if any, with the slaying.

2. The possibility that Sanborn, whose father was a Federal Judge in St. Paul, Minn., was killed and his body carted to the shallow grave near Bayside, Long Island, loomed strong when it was disclosed that, although he had been shot twice in the back, there were no bullet holes in his coat.

3. While police were inclined to place little credence in the possibility that Sanborn was slain battling with blackmailers or kidnapers, the investigation nevertheless encompassed this theory.

Meanwhile, police were hopeful two other sources would bring information of value. One was a safe deposit box maintained by Sanborn in a Manhattan bank, and the second was that Bancroft Mitchell, son of the former Attorney General, could shed some light on Sanborn's contemplated investment in a Connecticut brewery.

Fire Rescue Squad Keeps Man Alive

Fighting off the shadow of death which has hovered for more than 36 hours over Roman Lewis, 57 years old, of 731 Princeton street northeast, members of the Fire Rescue Squad early today were grimly holding their ground in a hand-fought battle.

With oxygen-administering equipment, squad members were spelling each other off in four-hour shifts in an long-drawn effort to save Lewis' life. Lewis was stricken with a heart attack Monday. The squad has been helping to keep Lewis alive since Monday.

Johns Hopkins Interne Dies in Crash; One Hurt

Hanover, Pa., Aug. 8 (AP).—Dr. John Davis Gambill, 26-year-old interne at the Johns Hopkins Hospital of Baltimore, was killed instantly late tonight near here as another physician, according to police, lost control of his automobile and it overturned.

Retire and Save Cuba, Welles Urges Machado In Demand for Peace

Nazi's Pledge to Stop Austria Drive Accepted

They "Didn't Do It Now, But Won't Again," London Is Told.

London, Aug. 8 (AP).—The British government is satisfied for the present with German assurances against further unfriendly actions toward Austria, the Austrian charge d'affaires was told at the foreign office this afternoon when he held a conference with officials there.

The Italian government has informed Great Britain of German assurances that every effort will be made to put a stop to incidents such as dropping propaganda leaflets over Austria and broadcasting of attacks on the Austrian government.

Von Wimmer, Austrian charge, was informed that under the circumstances the immediate object desired by the British government had been attained. The British charge d'affaires at Berlin so informed the German government yesterday, at the same time outlining representations which otherwise he would make.

The Austrian charge was told in Downing street that in view of assurances given by the German government Great Britain hopes there will be no repetition of the incidents.

It was explained that the British government was waiting to see that the assurances were kept and was overlooking last night's communique from the Wilhelmstrasse, which called the British and French representations inadmissible under the four-power peace pact. The British view is that this communique was designed only for German internal consumption.

Paris, Aug. 8 (AP).—The German government, it was said in authoritative quarters today, has privately assured France, Great Britain and Italy, with regard to alleged improper activities toward Austria, that Germany "didn't do it, but won't do it again."

Arizona Wets Ahead, 3 to 1, In Repeal Vote

31,683-to-9,604 Ballot Is Cast; Will Be 21st State to Change.

Phoenix, Ariz., Aug. 8 (AP).—Bone dry for 18 years, Arizona by a vote of more than 3 to 1, today became the twenty-first State to ratify the amendment to expel prohibition from the Federal Constitution.

Ratification of the repealing amendment was assured when returns from 313 of the State's 444 precincts gave 31,683 votes for repeal and 9,604 against.

Mrs. Idabella Greenway, Democratic national committeewoman for Arizona, and friend of President Roosevelt's family, defeated two men opponents for the State's lone congressional post, vacated by Lewis W. Douglas, now director of the Federal budget. Her Democratic nomination is virtually equivalent to election, as no Republicans were in the field.

She was leading her nearest opponent in the Democratic primary, Harlow Akers, young Phoenix attorney, who was an unsuccessful candidate last year for the United States Senate, 15,830 to 7,764 in the incomplete count. William Coxon, former secretary of the Arizona Corporation Commission, the only other aspirant, had polled 3,022.

The drys conceded defeat following the recent overwhelming repeal of the State prohibition law. They failed to place any names of delegates on the ticket.

Many Shots Fly In Milk Battle

Little Falls, N. Y., Aug. 8 (AP).—Striking milk farmers tonight fired a fusillade of rifle shots from ambush, narrowly missing two State troopers who were part of a convoy accompanying eight large tank trucks of milk. More than a dozen shots were fired.

The 28 troopers, under command of Lieut. J. A. Morrisey, returned the fire. Observers estimated that more than 300 rounds were fired into the undergrowth along the highways. No one was hit, however.

This is the second time milk trucks have been fired upon during the milk strike. Tonight's shooting occurred at East Creek, a quarter of a mile west of the Herkimer-Montgomery County line.

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 8 (AP).—Gov. Lehman's efforts to placate striking dairymen by a legislative investigation of the State milk control board were blocked tonight by the Republican-controlled Assembly.

While strikers and nonstrikers continued their hand-to-hand clashes and many up-State milk plants were closed for want of milk, the Republican members of the Assembly issued a statement declaring that the enforcement of law and protection of life and property is the governor's responsibility.

New British Decree To Modify Tariff Rates

Paris, Aug. 8 (AP).—The long-awaited relief for American business interests, which suffered heavily in the tariff increases decreed July 12, has been ordered in a modifying decree which will be published in the official journal tomorrow.

By the new decree numerous American products, on which the general tariff was raised in some cases representing a four-fold increase, will be placed again under the minimum and intermediary rates.

U. S. Ambassador's Plan for Ouster Fought by President.

Leave Held Way To Stop Turmoil

(Copyright, 1933, by The Associated Press.)

Havana, Aug. 8.—Sumner Welles, United States Ambassador, it was confirmed from a high source, told President Gerardo Machado today that he must ask Congress for a leave of absence if Cuba's political problems are to be settled.

This was the principal point of a formula agreed to by Cuban political parties and presented to the president by Welles in his capacity as mediator of the island's political difficulties.

The government appeared ready to resist.

Machado announced a short time before:

To Retain Office.

"I am and I continue being President of Cuba in the plenitude of all my constitutional prerogatives, of which I may not cede the smallest part without betraying the confidence deposited in me by the Cuban people."

Two policemen were killed and two others wounded late tonight by unidentified persons, who fired upon them from an automobile with machine guns in a park.

One of those injured is a brother of the Cuban Minister to the Dominican Republic.

The president's statement was issued in the face of demands yesterday that he resign. A bloody disturbance in which 21 persons lost their lives followed circulation of a report that Machado was on the verge of leaving his post.

Calls Party Leaders.

Immediately after Welles left the palace today the president summoned leaders of the Liberal party, of which he is a member. He told them, it was learned, that he would not accept the proposal, whereupon the party representatives were reported to have promised that they would stand by him.

Meanwhile, a committee of the House of Representatives had under consideration a motion presented at a secret session last night by Salvador Garcia Ramos, a Liberal, describing Welles' mediation efforts as prejudicial to Cuban independence.

Gen. Alberto Herrera, secretary of war and acting secretary of state, said Machado will consider tomorrow his answer to the Welles formula. He characterized as "absolutely unfounded" rumors that President Machado had instructed high army officers to prepare to resist intervention. Concerning Welles, he declared the president was "enchanted" with the ambassador's mediation efforts.

Loyalty of Youths Asked.

Broadcasts from an unidentified location called on Cuban youth to join in resisting intervention by the United States. One speaker said arms would be issued to anyone desiring to fight for the maintenance of Cuban independence. Another, announced as a Popular party senator, urged all young Cubans to support the present administration.

The formula presented by Welles embodied these points:

That Machado immediately name a secretary of state acceptable to all political factions. (The Cuban constitution provides for the succession of the secretary of state to the presidency in the event that office becomes vacant).

That thereafter Machado must ask Congress for an indefinite leave of

3 Banks Closed By Wholesale Bonds Forgery

Kansas Broker Is Accused in Gigantic Fraud on State School Fund.

Topeka, Kans., Aug. 8 (AP).—A gigantic municipal bond forgery, which authorities believe may have been a million dollar swindle, caused the closing of three State banks today and the arrest of one man.

Ronald Finney, bond broker and son of W. W. Finney, Emporia banker, surrendered after being charged with offering $20,000 in forged bonds to the National Bank of Topeka. He was released on $25,000 bond and preliminary hearing was set for September 5.

Gov. Alf M. Landon revealed that eight issues of Kansas municipal bonds totalling $329,000, purchased by the State school fund and held in the State treasury vaults, had been forged in duplicate, making $658,000 in spurious bonds.

One set of forged bonds, Gov. Landon said, was in the State Treasurer's office as security for State funds on deposit in three State banks, while the other set was in Chicago, probably in the hands of brokers.

The three banks whose deposits were secured by the forged bonds immediately were ordered closed by H. W. Koeneke, State bank commissioner, "for examination and for protection of the depositors." They are the Fidelity State and Savings Bank of Emporia, of which Finney's father is president; the Eureka Bank, Eureka, and the Farmers State Bank, Neosho Falls.

Farm Deductions For Loans Studied

Board to Decide If Sums Will Be Subtracted From Benefit Payments.

(Associated Press.)

A committee of three was selected yesterday by the Cabinet Advisory Board to study the question of whether benefit payments can be made to farmers under the farm act for curtailing crop production without deducting sums the farmers now owe the Government.

The committee consists of Secretary Wallace, Henry Morgenthau, jr., governor of the Farm Credit Administration, and Chairman Jones of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Attorney General Cummings, who was asked for an opinion on the subject by Secretary Wallace, did not attend. Wallace is absent from the city and Assistant Secretary Tugwell may act in his place.

New British Envoy To Moscow Named

Full Fledged Ambassador Has Been Lacking Since March 30.

Moscow, Aug. 8 (AP).—The British government has appointed Viscount Chilston as its Ambassador to Moscow, succeeding the recalled Sir Esmond Ovey, it was learned today. The Soviet government has found Lord Chilston persona grata.

The new envoy is expected some time in September, when, for the first time since March 30, Britain will be represented by a full-fledged ambassador here.

Boston Lawyer Indicted In Tear Gas Bombing

New York, Aug. 8 (AP).—An indictment for malicious mischief, a felony, was returned in general sessions court today against Eugene S. Daniell, jr., accused of placing two tear-gas bombs in the ventilating system of the New York Stock Exchange last week.

Daniell, a Boston attorney who garnered some 300 votes for President last November on a "one-man" ticket, will be arraigned tomorrow.

Nation's Press Submits Draft Of NRA Code

(Associated Press.)

The Nation's newspaper publishers yesterday presented a code of operation to the National Recovery Administration, offering to accept, with a few minor amendments, the President's blanket reemployment agreement.

The proposed code, said Howard Davis, president of the American Newspaper Publishers Association, "provides for a shortening of hours, for minimum wages higher than provided in the blanket agreement, for the maintenance of existing contracts, and the reservation of the constitutional right of a free press—which can not be abridged by the application of a licensing system or the use of injunctions to suppress a newspaper."

Delivery Boys Allowed.

Meanwhile, Hugh S. Johnson, recovery administrator, said he had not seen and had not approved the code. He added that every time he had seen a previous proposed code presented by the spokesmen for the publishers he had rejected it as unsatisfactory and that he knew nothing about whether the one submitted today remedied the defects to which he objected.

The proposed agreement, which would go into effect August 31 or sooner if approved by the President, would put the publishers in line with other industries in barring child labor. It would not, however, prevent the use of minors for newspaper delivery when their hours of work would not conflict with school attendance.

It also would except "professional persons" or those in managerial, supervisory or executive capacity who receive more than $35 per week. Editors and reporters were excepted as members of a profession.

Right to Organize.

The maximum work-week for accounting, clerical, office, service or sales employes (except outside employes) would be 40 hours. The maximum week for any factory, mechanical worker or artisan would be 40 hours, but with the right to work a 44-hour week within any six-month period during the tenure of the agreement.

For the mechanical department, including the artisan, the hourly rate of wage would be not less than that which prevailed in his community on July 15, 1929, for the same work. This, the publishers unofficially explained, was a substantial increase for this type of work over the 40 cents an hour minimum prescribed in the President's blanket code.

The publishers proposed that employes have the right to organize and bargain collectively, but that "no employe and no one seeking employment shall be required as a condition of employment to join any company union or to refrain from joining, organizing or assisting a labor organization of his own choosing."

U. S. Prosecutor Warns Kidnapers

(Associated Press.)

A stern warning to criminals that kidnaping does not pay and will be followed by swift, certain capture and severe punishment was sounded last night by Joseph B. Keenan, special assistant to Attorney General Cummings, in an address outlining the Government's plan to fight gangsters.

Keenan cited 13 cases of kidnaping since the Lindbergh case, asserting arrests have been made in all but one of them. Drastic sentences, he said, were meted out to those who have stood trial.

Keenan said the department would seek the most severe penalties for all kidnapers and would turn them over to the State authorities for prosecution when the State laws were more severe.

Death Adds to Mystery In Poisoning of Nine terests—bottle makers, stave makers, and the like.

"The bankers of the country," the senator says, "are playing into the hands of the Federal Reserve. The banks called in loans and had only two things to do with this money—lend it, or pay off their indebtedness to the Federal Reserve. As no one, outside the brewery interests, has any money, there was only one thing to do—put the money back in the Federal Reserve to release banking indebtedness. Once the Federal Reserve gets it, the money goes out of circulation. A scarcity of money—and there you are," said the senator, or words to that effect.

A stanch supporter of President Roosevelt, Senator Thomas can not understand why the Chief Executive has not used the powers granted him by Congress. The senator describes these powers as "the greatest ever given any individual, of group of individuals, on the face of the earth—at any time."

Unless something is done to break up the warfare now taking place within the Government, Senator Thomas says Gen. Johnson can hang out all the NRA signs he can get his hands on; but to no avail.

Head of Prison Today Tells of Druggan Case

Bates Will Get Report on Liberties Given Beer Baron Inmate.

(Associated Press.)

A report on conditions in the Federal Penitentiary, at Leavenworth, Kans., which permitted extension of undue privileges to Terrance Druggan, Chicago beer baron, will be presented to Sanford Bates, director of prisons, today by Robert H. Hudspeth, warden of the prison annex.

The warden has asserted the privileges accorded Druggan were without his knowledge or sanction, but the Justice Department indicated a thorough inquiry would be made.

Pending Hudspeth's report, Bates refused to discuss the case, which has resulted already in the suspension of three members of the prison personnel—James A. Ording, chaplain; Lester Wahler, guard, and Cernon R. Swearingen, foreman automobile mechanic. They were suspended after James N. Bennett, assistant director of prisons, reported they had admitted a part in permitting Druggan to make visits outside the prison walls.

The investigation by Bennett was said to have disclosed that Druggan had been made a trusty to drive the institution truck and while doing this was permitted to call at several places in the City of Leavenworth and to visit a woman friend.

Rockefeller Aid Claim Upheld

Senators Told His Land Buying Helps Cattle Ranchers.

Jackson, Wyo., Aug. 8 (AP).—Robert E. Miller, one of the original settlers of the rugged Jackson Hole country, told a Senate investigating committee today that cattle men in the regions are in a better position now than before John D. Rockefeller, jr., began to buy land there.

Miller was the original purchasing agent for the Snake River Land Co., which represented Rockefeller. The latter's plan was to buy thousands of acres and turn the tract over to the national park system. Some cattle men have objected strenuously, contending they have been forced to sell and that the project would increase taxes and stop progress in the region.

More open range is now available to cattle men, and in addition they have lanes through private holdings from winter to summer, Miller said.

"You mean to say that the cattle men now have free use of lands on which Rockefeller pays the taxes?" Senator Norbeck (Republican), South Dakota, asked.

"Yes, that is true," Miller replied.

Federal Jobs Due Many in Projects

Interior Department, even if some of the agencies now located there were forced to move.

Even if no other emergency agencies hired large local staffs, combined plans of the Navy Department and the Public Works Administration alone would provide some 4,200 new jobs. The outside estimate of Washington workers discharged during the economy drive reached only 4,000.

Navy officials emphasized that acceleration in the work of the Washington Navy Yard would be slow, but steady. About 100 will be taken on at once. Jobs gradually will be created for blacksmiths, helpers, forge workers, furnace men, pattern makers, and the general run of machinists. All are under Civil Service. The commission announced yesterday that applications for positions in 40 mechanical trades would be received up to August 22. The Navy Yard's labor board also is revising existing employment registers.

"T" for One

(Associated Press.)

The family of the national recovery administrator disagrees over the spelling of its name and here's how, as explained by friends of Gen. Hugh S. Johnson.

The general started out in life by spelling it "Johnston." He went to Kansas years ago and somehow, during his travels there, he lost the "t."

When his son, Kilborne, came to the age for entrance into the Military Academy at West Point, the general asked him if he wouldn't please restore the "t."

The boy did so. His recent detail by the Army to the Recovery Administration brought out the apparent disagreement over the spelling.

Capital's NRA "Police Force" To Be Named

Woman Will Be Picked With Other Officers at Session Today.

Commanders in chief of Washington's NRA drive will meet at 10 a. m. today at Board of Trade headquarters to complete the organization of the civic police force which will carry the cause of shorter hours and increased employment and wages to every section of the city.

Among new officers to be named will be a woman to hold the post of lieutenant general. Five divisions majors, five team captains and 40 team members also will be selected.

Every type of publicity will be used to forward the campaign. A canvass will be made of the entire city, to determine if employers are living up to code agreements and where employment may be increased.

"The people of Washington will either have to help the unemployed through backing up the NRA or help to support them through charity and other means next winter," he said.

A recovery board for the District was still in the process of organization last night. Daniel C. Roper, Secretary of Commerce, was reported to have a number of names under consideration.

The duties of the board will be "to get every patriotic American citizen, employer and consumer, to cooperate in the program."

Blue eagles were obtained by 439 employers yesterday, bringing the total enrollment to 4,616.

J. K. Hamblin Buried; Carolina Legislator

Union, S. C., Aug. 8 (AP).—John K. Hamblin, 52, whose tenure of office as Speaker of the South Carolina House set a modern record, was buried here today.

Hamblin died yesterday at Franklin, N. C., after an operation for removal of a brain tumor. He presided over seven sessions of the South Carolina House.

Basic Policies Of President Will Be Kept

Monetary and Economic Problems Are Surveyed; Plan No Changes.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Hyde Park, N. Y., Aug. 8.—President Roosevelt surveyed a wide range of monetary and economic problems today, but official word from the summer White House tonight was to the effect that no change is imminent in any of the basic policies of the administration.

Speculative reports that direct steps toward currency inflation, under the Thomas amendment, have been considered by the President during his vacation here were discouraged in an official resume of the day's conversations. Equally emphatic was the official repudiation of recent reports that domestic stabilization of the dollar is considered.

The President conferred for four hours with Professors James Harvey Rogers, of Yale, and George Warren, of Cornell. Accompanying these advisers on currency and fiscal problems was James Warburg, member of the New York financial community.

Secretary of the Treasury William H. Woodin, who has been recuperating from a serious illness for six weeks, is scheduled to visit the President tomorrow. Louis Douglas, director of the budget, also was reported en route from Washington tonight.

President Roosevelt was represented today as desirous of retaining Secretary Woodin in the Treasury as long as his health will permit. There was no comment on reports that Mr. Woodin might present his resignation tomorrow.

A further hint that President Roosevelt contemplates no immediate steps in regard to money was seen in the announcement that he contemplates no meeting with Montague Norman, the governor of the Bank of England, who is now en route to New York. He is scheduled to confer with Gov. George L. Harrison, of the New York Federal Reserve Bank, presumably on the problem of establishing a more stable basis for Anglo-American exchange.

Federal Boycott Held Over Slackers

taken from them and never will be able to get it back, Gen. Johnson said.

Speeds Up Work.

Efforts wll be made to put practically every important industry under temporary codes within the next couple of weeks.

"At the proper time—when I think the time is ripe," he said, "I will try to get the people to move the goods.

"I think it is perfectly obvious that this important movement involves the support by the consumer of the producer, and I mean support of the producer who is working with the country to bring about recovery by joining in the movement."

Henry Ford will not be allowed to use a Blue Eagle unless he subscribes to the code prescribed for the automobile industry generally, Gen. Johnson said. Mr. Ford has contended that his standards were above the minimum requirements of the blanket code. Hearings on the automobile code probably will be set this week.

Several businesses and industries were temporarily blanketed into the wage and hours provisions of the recovery program yesterday. These included retail coal dealers, metal workers, lithographers, and barbers and beauticians.

Hearings on the bituminous industry codes are to begin today.

Newspaper publishers submitted and made public provisions of a code for their business, which Johnson has not formally accepted.

Board Studies Strike.

The national labor arbitration board undertook settlement of the public belt bridge strike in New Orleans. Pending decision the workers will return.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, said that members of every unit of his organization would ferret out violations of the code.

Gen. Johnson appointed the cotton textile national relations board, which is to handle arbitration. Hundreds of complaints have been made to national recovery headquarters. One employe of a Southern cotton mill wrote that experienced operatives of 20 and 30 years' experience were being compelled to sign application cards for jobs as apprentices under threat of dismissal. The employers are permitted to pay apprentices less.

Named For Virginia Postoffice.

The Postoffice Department appointed Mrs. Lizzie Thompson postmistress at Keokee, Lee County, Va. She succeeds Palmer H. Cooper, resigned.

With Roosevelt at Hyde Park

By Lawrence Sullivan.

Reviewing the crowded business agenda at the summer White House, a member of the President's official family was moved to observe, "And he calls it a vacation!"

The point overlooked was that President Roosevelt came to Hyde Park on a "working vacation." As it turned out, the emphasis the first week was on "working." During the week the President—

Approved the largest naval building program since 1916.

Avoided a difficult Cabinet situation by launching a national kidnaping inquiry under the direction of Prof. Raymond Moley.

Settled the paralyzing Pennsylvania coal strike, which had threatened for a few days to undermine the entire national recovery program.

Set up a new commission of seven to adjust disputes arising under the NRA codes.

Received an exhaustive first-hand report from Secretary Hull on the London Economic Conference, and outlined a new basis for American foreign policy, which is to center on Latin-American relations.

• • • •

In addition to these major enterprises, the President signed half a dozen executive orders affecting bureau or departmental reorganization, received 27 callers from Washington, New York, and Albany, held three press conferences, and sat twice before the cameras at Hyde Park—once with Mrs. Roosevelt and once with Secretary Hull.

In his spare time, the President found opportunity for swimming four afternoons, and once he got away with only his chauffeur for a two-hour automobile drive along the West bank of the Hudson. In the evening hours of relaxations, he journeyed up country three times for dinner, once to the Vincent Astor estate, once to the Rhinebeck place of Uncle Frederick A. Delano, and once to the Wiccopee estate of Henry Morgenthau.

All in all, there may be something to the weary aid's observation, "And he calls it a vacation!"

• • • •

There is a tradition growing up in Hyde Park and all nearby airports which runs about as follows: "When Hugh Johnson comes to town prepare to stay up practically all night, and to get up very early next morning, anyhow." With the coal strike settlement in his inside pocket, Johnson arrived at Haverstack Air Field, 12 miles away, at 11 p. m. last Thursday.

A White House car took him to Hyde Park in 15 minutes. Leaving the President at 12:45 a. m., Johnson motored to the summer executive offices in Poughkeepsie, another 6 miles, to announce the terms of the truce.

After a half-hour press conference, he remembered having left Washington at 7 o'clock without dinner. So into the car again to a favored eating place 3 miles down the Albany post road.

And so to bed at a few minutes before 4, and up at 8 for a take-off from Haverstack at 9, and back to the old grind on Fourteenth street. Poughkeepsie calls him Mile-a-Minute Johnson.

"New Deal," the beautiful Missouri thoroughbred presented to the President two weeks ago at Washington, has been entered in the Dutchess County Fair, to be held at Poughkeepsie late this month. State Senator J. Griswold Webb, chairman of the Dutchess County Agricultural Society, signed up "New Deal" when he called at Hyde Park Monday to invite the Chief Executive and Mrs. Roosevelt to participate in President's Day at the fair. Mr. Roosevelt consented to attend the fair as a citizen of the county, but he would not countenance a "President's Day." Another entry from the Roosevelt stable will be in competition at the fair, but the selection is to be made by Mrs. Anna Dall, the President's daughter. She favors a horse born on the Hyde Park estate.

Mrs. Roosevelt's favorite theme in public speaking, the shifting social standards and ideals of the day, was followed with keen interest last week when the First Lady was guest of honor before friends and neighbors at the Summer Institute of Euthenics, at Vassar College.

"Children today must be taught that they are to decide for themselves and do what they think is right," Mrs. Roosevelt advised parents. "Today we must tell our children, 'We want you to live up to your own ideals and standards, and then if you are satisfied, we will be too.'"

Marvin McIntyre, White House secretary, was summoned to Pawling last Sunday to referee a baseball game between Lowell Thomas' Saints and Sinners and the White House White Hopes, an aggregation of Washington sluggers from the Secret Service and the newspaper corps.

Untrained in baseball, without rooters, and playing on a strange field 25 miles from their Hyde Park base, the Washington team piled up a three-run lead in the sixth inning. McIntyre became so enthusiastic that he asked to be relieved as umpire to get into the line-up. The game was called at the end of the seventh inning, when the score stood 23 to 18 in favor of the White Hopes, but the umpire had achieved his big moment at bat. His Texas Leaguer scored two runs for the visitors.

The vicious element in Pawling circulated reports that the game was for a keg of beer, but the better classes sustained the official announcement that it was a beenfit for the local Red Cross. Umpire McIntyre called it simply NRA—a Needed Restful Afternoon.

With Tammany Hall again facing a threatening fusion movement in the approaching mayoralty elections in New York City, political observers here are wondering if President Roosevelt will use his influence to force a thorough-going housecleaning at the Wigwam.

A series of conferences at Hyde Park last week with ranking Democratic potentates in New York appeared to confirm rumors that Mr. Roosevelt is at least watching city developments with keen interest.

In the end, perhaps, the President will have nothing to do with the factional realignment now shaping in Tammany Hall, in which case last week's pilgrimage of New York politicos to Hyde Park must be dismissed as a mere coincidence.

President Roosevelt plans to leave Hyde Park late Friday night. His special train will pass through Washington early Saturday morning, but will stop only long enough to unload the White House files.

The President and his party then will continue southward to some convenient spot in the Shenandoah Valley, probably in the vicinity of Luray, Va.

There the party will be met by White House motors, to return to the Capital by way of one or two of the larger civilian conservation camps in middle Virginia. The President is eager to see and observe the daily routine of the camp workers.

He plans to reach Washington after sundown Saturday. The return trip to Hyde Park is expected to begin the following Friday night.

(Associated Press.)

Two major issues and innumerable complex problems were raised last night by bituminous coal men as they gathered for a hearing today on their 25 codes of fair competition.

The primary disputes centered around whether the United Mine Workers of America should be recognized as representing the Nation's mine labor, and, secondly, what should be the minimum daily wage and what differentials should be allowed for various producing fields.

Around and into these questions were woven the problems of rail rates, competition of oil, gas and hydroelectric power; costs and standards of living; the mine workers' previous record; decreasing demand for coal owing to its more economical use; the meaning of the collective bargaining provision of the recovery act and numberless others.

Two of the 25 codes represent about 75 per cent of the Nation's annual production. They will be the first considered.

The principal and most of the secondary issues will arise while they are before Deputy Administrator K. M. Simpson, who will conduct the hearing.

The first of the two main agreements was submitted by a group including George Harrington, one of the largest Illinois operators, and Frank Taplin, of Cleveland, president of the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Co. and interested in several other companies.

It has become commonly known as the "union code" because of its approval by the United Mine Workers in all respects other than its maximum hours.

The code called for a basic daily wage for underground labor of $5, with a 25-cent differential for mines south of the Ohio and Potomac Rivers. It specified a maximum work week of 36 hours. The union wants a 30-hour week.

The agreement recognized the United Mine Workers as the agent for the miners in the collective bargaining called for by the recovery act. No strings were attached.

The second major agreement came from the Northern Coal Control Association and the Smokeless and Appalachian Coal Association, representing well over half of the Nations' total production.

U. S. Envoy Tells Machado to Quit

absence. With that request granted, the new secretary of state would succeed to the presidency and would immediately appoint a national cabinet representative of all political factions in the island.

Constitutional reforms worked out by opposition delegates and the three political parties in collaboration with Welles, which provide for the restoration of the office of vice president abolished by the 1928 constitutional reform, then would be submitted to Congress.

Once Congress had voted the reforms, they would be submitted to a constitutional convention which, under the constitution, must follow the action of Congress within six months. Delegates to the convention would be chosen at elections supervised by the Acting President.

Check Dead List.

The latest count of the results of yesterday's street firing, made by visits to the morgue and hospitals, showed 21 dead and 146 wounded.

The government announced some concessions to the strikers today, including the release of all those arrested in consequence of the strike and presidential pardons for several labor leaders now serving prison terms. Official recognition of the unions, many of which were organized as a result of the strike, also was promised.

Food Shortage Felt

Havana, Cuba, Aug. 8 (U.P.).—President Gerardo Machado, embattled chief executive of the troubled island republic, clung to office tonight in the face of a dangerous uprising against his iron rule.

The capital tonight was quiet after 24 hours of terror and bloodshed in riots against the Machado regime.

Citizens were beginning to feel the effects of the store strikes and food was scarce. Suffering, especially among the poor, was spreading.

Many of the opposition parties' leaders were in hiding today as a result of yesterday's shooting around the presidential palace.

The capital was calm during the day. Troops were withdrawn.

Police continued to patrol the city heavily, and constitutional guarantees of civil rights were still suspended by Congress.

The general strike continued. In official quarters, it was said the transport workers, including omnibus and street car operators, would return to work tomorrow.

Roosevelt Watching

Hyde Park, N. Y., Aug. 8 (AP).—President Roosevelt is watching developments in Cuba closely and is standing by his proposal to have Ambassador Welles mediate for peace. Beyond this, however, nothing would be said tonight at the summer White House.

Assails Havana Deaths

Miami, Fla., Aug. 8 (U.P.).—Gen. Mario G. Menocal, leader of the Cuban political exiles here, late today characterized the shooting to death of a score of persons in Havana last night as a "savage massacre." He led an unsuccessful revolution against the Machado regime in 1931.

Senator Wants Reserve Bank Officer to Quit

Thomas Charges Kent Attacked President on Inflation.

(Associated Press.)

In an open letter, Senator Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma, yesterday charged Fred I. Kent, foreign exchange comptroller of the New York Federal Reserve Bank, with imputing "bad faith" to President Roosevelt and demanded Kent's resignation.

Thomas, author of the inflation amendment enacted by Congress, said Kent in a recent magazine article, imputed to the President the motive of defeating the will of Congress on inflationary legislation.

"Unless you have proof for such imputation," Thomas wrote to Kent, "you owe to the President and to the Congress an immediate retraction. I do not believe there is such a divergence between the administration and the purpose of Congress.

"Congress and the President are in accord. It is you who are at variance with the program of your Government and working against its expressed purposes. Under the circumstances you should resign."

Nude Dancer Is Fined; "Can't Buy New Fans"

Chicago, Aug. 8 (AP).—Sally Rand, petite dancer of the ostrich fans, was fined $25 and costs today for staging an indecent performance at a local theater.

"And," sighed Sally as she walked out of the courtroom, "I was about to spend $25 for new fans. Now what'll I do?"

The judge apparently decided that problem for Sally. He heard testimony from police who witnessed the performance and then ordered Sally to wear clothing beneath her fans or to forfeit a $200 peace bond each time she appeared in the nude.

Meteor's Fall Blamed For Explosion in West

Scotts Bluff, Nebr., Aug. 8 (AP).—A trail of grayish smoke in the skies and vibrations which shook buildings over a wide territory in western Nebraska and eastern Wyoming today were believed to have been caused by fall of a meteor of considerable size.

Residents in the vicinity of Henry, Nebr., reported a great explosion. It sent employes of the Pathfinder Irrigation District rushing to the country, where a large dynamite stock was stored.

3,500 Dyeing Workers Strike in Philadelphia

Philadelphia, Aug. 8 (AP).—A walkout, which union leaders said took 3,500 employes of cleaning and dyeing establishments from their jobs in protest against the industry's alleged failure to adopt a code, was the dominant note today in Philadelphia's strike situation.

"Only two of the city's 40 plants are working," Jules Geltzer, secretary of the joint board of the cleaning and dyeing industry, said.

$35,000 Bonds Seized; Dallas Attorney Held

Dallas, Tex., Aug. 8 (AP).—Bonds valued at $35,000, which Dallas police said were stolen from a New York bank messenger in a holdup May 25, were seized here with the arrest of a Dallas attorney in the lobby of a downtown office building.

J. P. Miller, the attorney, refused to name a client who, he said, had sent the bonds to him to sell. He said the messenger had delivered the bonds to his office today and he had taken them to the building.

Mule Reform

Hee! Haw! He Must Crush Cotton Stalks He Was Trained to Protect.

(Associated Press.)

Paul A. Porter, of the administration, just back from the South, reported yesterday that many farmers had complained they found difficulty in getting their mules to "act right" while plowing up the cotton.

It isn't the mule's fault, at that, Porter explained. All these years he has been lambasted if he walked atop the cotton row. Now it is the reverse and he is being asked—if used singly—to trample down the stalks he has been trained so carefully to protect.

Dole Is Named Administrator Of Food Trades

Hawaii Pineapple Packer Picked by Peek Upon Processors' Advice.

James Dole, of Honolulu, who rose to national prominence in 1927 by posting a $25,000 prize for the first successful flight from the United States to Hawaii, has been appointed administrator of food industries for the Farm Adjustment Administration, it was learned last night.

Though the appointment of Dole, who as chairman of the board of an Hawaiian pineapple company has had wide experience in the processing and distribution of foodstuffs, has not been announced officially, it was understood from sources close to Farm Administrator George Peek that the islander will supervise formulation of marketing and trade agreements for the Nation's food processors.

Dole's appointment was said to have been suggested to the administration by the Food Industries advisory committee, composed of twenty-nine of the country's leading food processors. He was called to Washington last week from British Columbia, where he was on vacation.

Though he has taken a leading part in civic affairs in Honolulu since going there in 1907 to found the pineapple canning company, it is Dole's first appointment to public office.

Dole's prize offering six years ago resulted in a wave of United States-to-Honolulu flights, many of which resulted in tragedy. The prize ultimately was won by Art Goebel.

Mother Accused Of Kidnaping Son

2 Men Seized for Aiding in Taking Boy Court Awarded to Father.

Syracuse, N. Y., Aug. 8 (AP).—Mrs. Geraldine Reynolds Dutton, 22, residing near Buffalo, was reported by police to be fleeing west through Canada tonight with her son, Richard Allen Dutton, 3, kidnaped this afternoon from the summer camp of his father.

Authorities said two men in custody confessed their participation in the case. Harold L. King, chauffeur, and William L. Bugbee, private detective, both of Syracuse, arrested on warrants charging kidnaping said, according to Prosecutor Hinney, that Mrs. Dutton engineered the plot without their full knowledge.

Warrants were sworn by the aviator-father of the child for his wife, whom he married after a romance which began while they were pupils at a Chicago flying school. Theft of a child from the parent awarded its custody by court is legally kidnaping.

Urschel Case Ransom Money Found; 3 Held

Twin City Gang Haunts May Yield Kidnapers of Oil Man.

Minneapolis, Aug. 8 (AP).—The discovery of some of the money paid kidnapers of Charles F. Urschel, millionaire Oklahoma oil man, and arrest of three men linked with passing the marked currency spurred Federal operatives' hope today that Twin City gang haunts might yield full answer to the mystery of the abductors' identities.

An investigation was being pressed along two lines. Though secrecy shrouded activities, one phase embraced intensive investigations of hoodlums and their haunts on the possibility that Twin City racketeers might have been the abductors of Urschel at his Oklahoma City home July 22. The oil man was released several days later on payment of undisclosed amount of ransom.

Another theory was that a Twin City gang had contact with the actual "snatchers" and were passing the marked money for currency that could not be identified.

None of the three men held, it was understood, was suspected of being the actual kidnapers but authorities hoped to open up through them a line of inquiry that would lead to Urschel's abductors.

U. S. Aid in Prices Of Tobacco Asked

Talmadge Wires Roosevelt Deploring Attitude of Manufacturers.

Atlanta, Aug. 8 (AP).—Immediate action is necessary by the Federal Government to bring better prices to Georgia tobacco growers, Gov. Talmadge wired President Roosevelt today at his Hyde Park (N. Y.) home after a delegation of farmers protested to him about prevailing quotations.

Mr. Talmadge said:

"It is going to take some strong-arm methods to make this monopoly (the tobacco manufacturers) do the right thing for the farmers of the country."

The telegram said that tobacco sales in the Georgia bright leaf belt were averaging about 13 cents a pound gross while tobacco products were selling at the same price as when tobacco was bringing 50 to 75 cents a pound.

50,000 New England Firms Adopt Codes

Boston, Aug. 8 (AP).—Signed pledges of New England business and industrial firms today passed the 50,000 mark, placing the total number of employes under code regulations at more than 500,000.

A visitor today to the district office of the National Recovery Administration was James Roosevelt, son of the President, who congratulated Hugh Butler, district secretary, on the thoroughness and activity of his force.

Mary McCormic Named In Revenue Lien Suit

Los Angeles, Aug. 8 (AP).—Mary McCormic, opera singer, and an Australian screen writer, John V. Farrow, were named today in liens filed in Federal court by an internal revenue collector.

The Government charged Miss McCormic owed $120 on her 1932 income tax and Farrow $203.74 on his 1930 tax. Farrow recently entered a nolo contendere plea in Federal court to making false statements in an alien citizen's entry application.

Prisoner Escape Plot Laid to Resort Owner

Chicago, Aug. 8 (AP).—Louis (Doc) Stacci, roadhouse operator, also known as Stacy, was named by the Federal Government today as the man who plotted the scheme to free Frank Nash, escaped convict, at the Union Station in Kansas City on June 17.

Four peace officers and Nash met death at the hands of a machine gun crew when the plot failed. Verne Miller, notorious South Dakota outlaw, is sought by the Government as the leader of the machine gunners.

Balbo Cheered In Azores for 1,500-Mile Hop

Rockets and Sirens Greet Italian Air Armada; Weather Is Ideal.

Horta, Azores, Aug. 8 (AP).—The Italian transatlantic squadron of 24 seaplanes arrived in the Azores late today from Shoal Harbor, N. F., completing the 1,500-mile flight, which is the longest stage on the homeward journey.

Gen. Italo Balbo, the leader, descended with 15 ships at Ponta Delgada, while 9 planes, under the immediate direction of Gen. Pellegrini, came down to the water in Horta Harbor.

A discharge of rockets and the shriek of sirens greeted the group of nine as it arrived here to be welcomed by thousands of sightseers. The breakwater and the quay were covered with blue heaps of hydrangeas for the reception.

The silvered seaplanes flew in perfect formation to their landing places, presenting an impressive sight as they reflected the brilliant sunshine. With military precision they taxied up to their buoys, which had been placed by the Italian mother ship, Citta di Catania.

Climbing out of his seaplane, Gen. Pellegrini showed no signs of weariness from the long ocean flight. He received an ovation from the crowd and said of today's exploit:

"It was a splendid journey. The sky was practically without clouds all the way from the immediate vicinity of Newfoundland. All the machines gave a good performance."

The Balbo armada left Shoal Harbor, N. F., at 2:45 a. m. Eastern standard time today, the flagship of the leader roaring aloft in advance for the long ocean hop to the Azores.

Unfavorable weather conditions had held the squadron at Shoal Harbor since July 26, when the airmen arrived there from Shediac, N. B., and New York, after a visit to the Chicago Exposition.

Roosevelt Plea Induces Coal Miners' Return

Recalcitrant Group Votes to Heed Appeal NRA Agent Brings.

Uniontown, Pa., Aug. 8 (AP).—An appeal from President Roosevelt, carried to the heart of the turbulent strike area, today swung western Pennsylvania's soft coal workers into the back-to-the-mines movement.

Stirred to enthusiasm as Edward F. McGrady, labor advisor of the NRA, delivered the President's message, more than 100 leaders of union locals decided by a unanimous, rising vote to return to work.

Acceptance of the armistice brings to an end the walkout which began two weeks ago today in the Fayette County mines of the H. C. Frick Coke Co., with a demand for operator recognition of the United Mine Workers of America.

General Return to Work.

With these locals—all in District No. 4, scene of violence in which one striker was shot to death and more than a score wounded—stepping into line, union leaders said the resumption of operations will be general throughout the bituminous coal fields.

Facing these recalcitrant local leaders, McGrady, who had flown to Uniontown from Washington, said:

"I am here, acting for the President of the United States and asking you to go back to work."

Operators "Out in Open."

The NRA mediator pointed out that today's meeting was a forerunner to the hearings on the bituminous coal code which begin tomorrow in Washington.

"This is the first time in the history of the Nation that the operators have agreed to talk in the open about raising your wages and shortening your working hours," McGrady said.

More workers returned to the mines in Washington County today, and a total of 7,000 out of 10,000 strikers now are back.

$15,186,996 Called Utility's Write-up

Federal Trade Probe Is Turned on Central Gas and Electric.

(Associated Press.)

The Federal Trade Commission's long investigation of utilities turned yesterday to the Central Gas and Electrc Co., with evidence presented to show a write-up at the end of 1931 of $15,186,996 in the value of investments in securities of its subsidiaries. The company, now in receivership, furnishes gas and electricity to 195,000 consumers in 391 communities in Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Wisconsin, Maine, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maryland, Florida, and the Canadian Provinces of New Brunswick and Quebec.

The evidence, placed in the record by Robert E. Healy, commission chief counsel, by examination of M. C. Steele, an examiner, included a 1931 balance sheet showing assets of $124,493,511. This included $15,000,000 as "carrying value of investments in securities of subsidiaries in excess of subsidiaries' book values."

Mrs. Costello's Witness Is Used By Prosecutor

Expert Admits Hydrocyanic Acid Not Cleaner Widow Claims.

Salem, Mass., Aug. 8 (AP).—The knowledge of Jessie Costello's star medical witness was used by the prosecution today in an effort to substantiate its own contentions in the trial of the Peabody woman for the poison-slaying of her husband.

John J. Ryan, second assistant district attorney, gained admissions from Dr. Alexander O. Goettler, of Brooklyn, N. Y., chemist and toxicologist, that in his opinion the findings of hydrocyanic acid in the body of a dead person meant that the poison had caused the death of that person, and that the poison was not a good cleaner for a copper boiler.

Fire Captain William J. Costello was found dead in his Peabody home on February 17. A subsequent autopsy and analysis disclosed the presence of poison in his body. Mrs. Costello had purchased potassium cyanide and oxalic acid the night before the captain died. She testified she intended to use them as a mixture to clean a copper boiler.

Andrew J. Fyfe, a brother of the defendant, testified he saw Costello mixing chemicals, "four or five times," and that the fire captain once told him he was mixing oxalic acid and cyanide.

Soviet Praised By Brookhart

Says American Cash Is Essential to Developing Reds' Trade.

(Associated Press.)

Describing Soviet credit as "the best in the world," former Senator Smith W. Brookhart, of Iowa, trade adviser to farm administrators, yesterday predicted early developments in a program for renewing Russian-United States trade relations on a large scale. He said extension of United States credit was essential in developing trade with the Soviet, adding that he expects Government action within a few weeks.

Brookhart has had conferences with the directors of the Reconstruction Corporation, which recently made a loan of $4,000,000 to the Amtorg Trading Corporation, Russia's commercial representative in this country.

Officials of the reconstruction Corporation he said are "very friendly" to proposals for extending credit to finance Russian trade and there is a possibility part of $200,000,000 available to farm administrators may be used to stimulate exports of surplus agricultural products to Russia.

Removing Fear of Cancer From Public Mind Now Aim

CARY T. GRAYSON.

Adm. Grayson Will Direct Institution Endowed to Study Disease.

Removal of fear from the minds of Washingtonians who have reached the age where medical experience has shown cancer to occur most frequently is the aim of Admiral Cary T. Grayson, retired.

Dedicated to Helen L. and Mary E. Warwick, both victims of the disease, the clinic was opened officially yesterday at 2542 Sherman avenue northwest. The institution was endowed by the late Randolph T. Warwick, Washington hotel and restaurant proprietor.

"Though medical research has shown that cancer occurs in one person out of ten over 50 years old, many who do not have it live in constant fear and dread of the disease," Admiral Grayson said.

"Examinations by modern methods will give these people essential peace of mind. On the other hand those who do have the disease are by no means lost and by proper examination and treatment may be cured. It is our purpose to develop the facilities at our disposal to serve both classes to the fullest."

The clinic, Admiral Grayson said, will be devoted to examination and treatment only. Facilities for hospitalization have not been provided. The clinic building has been provided with complete administration, record and examination rooms, X-ray and radium apparatus and pathological laboratories.

Dr. E. A. Merritt, Washington X-ray specialist, will be in charge of that branch of the clinic's activities.

The clinic will be under the control of the Washington Home for Foundlings, beneficiary of the Warwick endowment. Clarence A. Aspinwall is chairman of the board of directors of the foundling home.

Farley Asks Youth To Support NRA

New Business Declaration of Independence Seen in Recovery Act.

New York, Aug. 8 (AP).—Youthful America, regardless of party affiliation, was asked tonight by Postmaster General Farley to line up behind President Roosevelt's recovery effort.

"No attempt is being made to set up a supergovernment over business or industry," Mr. Farley said in an address, "but simply to give them the opportunity to govern themselves under the principles and purposes of the recovery program.

"There are two points about the crusade to make these plans effective, of which I wish to speak to the youth of America without other consideration than the common good of our country.

"The first is that there are no politics in this movement. There is no desire for either a party or a partisan advantage.* * * Humanity and justice and patriotism know no party, race or creed. This is a National movement."

The second point, Mr. Farley said, was publicity so that everyone would understand the program.

14 Countries Will Figure in Firemen's Fete

Secretary Wallace Accepts Invitation to Be Honorary Chairman.

Representatives from 14 countries have accepted invitations to review this year's National Firemen's Labor Day parade.

Sergt. A. J. Bargagni, parade marshal, in planning his most impressive group of dignitaries for the reviewing stand had sent invitations to Washington's foreign diplomats.

To date he has received acceptances from representatives of the following: France, Belgium, China, Brazil, Paraguay, Albania, Roumania, Netherlands, Panama, Dominica, Italy, Egypt, Greece and Chile.

Civic Group Impressive.

Along with several members of the Cabinet, now serving as honorary chairmen of the parade, Gov. Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland, and possibly two other State heads, and an impressive group of civic, fraternal and Government leaders, the foreign diplomats will watch the procession of firefighters from all parts of the country file down Pennsylvania avenue.

Added to the group of prominent citizens who are helping the firemen with their parade are Thomas P. Littlepage, president of The Washington Chamber of Commerce, and Claude W. Owen, president of The Washington Board of Trade. Odell S. Smith is chairman of this citizen's committee.

Wallace to Be Chairman.

Additional interest was centered on the parade when it became known yesterday that Secretary of Agriculture Wallace accepted Sergt. Bargagni's invitation to serve as an honorary chairman.

Other features of the parade and the convention of the National Firemen's Association will be discussed at a meeting tonight at the home of the president, Decatur street and Georgia avenue northwest.

Dying Doctor Says Woman Served Him Poisoned Drink

Prosecutor Reveals Death-Bed Statement Accusing Clinical Associate.

Greenwood, Miss., Aug. 8 (AP).—A death-bed statement from Dr. Preston Kennedy accusing an associate woman physician, Dr. Sara Tuth Dean, with poisoning him was disclosed here today by District Attorney Arthur Jordan.

The district attorney said the dying man told his two brothers that Dr. Dean, 33-year-old woman specialist in children's diseases, had given him poison in a drink of whisky in her home on the night of July 27.

Dr. Kennedy was quoted as saying he recognized the taste of the poison in the drink and that he left the woman's home as quickly as possible.

For five days he fought a silent battle to save his life with his own medical knowledge, but on August 1 he called in other physicians, who sent him to Jackson for treatment.

Realizing that he was dying from the slow poisoning, the district attorney said the doctor made a death bed statement to his two brothers, Dr. Henry Kennedy, of Greenwood, and Dr. Barney Kennedy, of Jackson, both dentists.

District Attorney Jordan made an affidavit charging the woman doctor with murder after he had attended Dr. Kennedy's funeral at Jackson.

Arrested by the sheriff, she said: "Well, I'm surprised."

She has since maintained silence in her jail cell and has employed counsel to represent her. She lived here with an aunt and was associated with Dr. Kennedy in clinical work. She was educated at the University of Mississippi and the University of Virginia and took a special course in New York. She is being held in jail without bail pending a preliminary trial.

Arlington Aid Asks Status of City in County

Plan Seen as Facilitating Grants From Public Works Fund.

BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

An effort to have Arlington County given the same status of a city or town during distribution of funds by the Public Works Administration was instituted yesterday by Harry A. Fellows, chairman of the County Board.

Mr. Fellows announced the move after receiving a report that Gov. Pollard of Virginia would recommend to the special session of the General Assembly that all cities and towns should be permitted to borrow from the administration without a public vote.

Elimination of a special election on the proposed bond issue of $2,250,000 for a county-wide sewerage system will be expedited by his plan, Mr. Fellows said.

Arlington County has been given nearly all of the governing rights of a city by the Assembly up to this time, he declared.

Two Children Shot In Sectional Row

Beaver Heights Resident Arrested in Case by Police.

Two small colored children were sprinkled with buckshot early yesterday in the orchard of Thomas H. Hutchinson in Beaver Heights, Md., where they were said to have been taking apples.

Hutchinson was arrested in connection with the shooting, although residents of the community said a woman fired on the children. He was taken to Upper Marlboro for questioning.

At Casualty Hospital Mildred and Sebrina Green, 7 and 5, were treated for shots in the face and back. Their condition is not serious.

The shooting was said by Prince Georges County Police to be the outgrowth of trouble between Beaver Heights and the adjoining Deanwood section of Washington.

Police Seeking Soldier In Shooting of Woman

Fort Humphreys, Fairfax County and Washington police late last night had not apprehended Private Oscar Foster, 24, colored, of the Engineer School Staff at the Army Post, who is alleged to have shot a Negro woman Monday night.

The wounded woman is Carrie Whitehead, 22. She told Army officials that Foster shot her after she refused to "go out" with him. The affair took place in the kitchen of a lieutenant's house, where she was employed. Her condition is not considered serious.

Capital's Big Chess Player Blocks Visiting Champion

When W. K. Wimsatt, jr., of Washington, the biggest chess player in the world, shook hands with Dr. Alexander Alekhine, best chess player in the world, the champion admitted he was stalemated.

Dr. Alexander Alekhine Admits Stalemate by 7-Foot Opponent.

Dr. Alexandria Alekhine, champion chess player, has found one Washington chess man he can't move, even with a shove.

Dr. Alekhine has seen some impressive chess players, but none like Washington's W. K. Wimsatt, jr., who is over seven feet tall and claims the distinction of being the biggest player in the world. Dr. Alekhine is of medium stature.

"I guess it's stalemate as far as forcing you to move is concerned," said Dr. Alekhine, looking Wimsatt over.

Conducting the visiting chess player to a board, Wimsatt, who is the son of one of the leading District players, showed Dr. Alekhine that his comment was entirely correct. After puzzling over one of Wimsatt's set-ups for 30 minutes, Dr. Alekhine gave up and asked for the solution.

Dr. Alekhine recently conducted record simultaneous blindfold play at the Chicago Century of Progress, running off 32 games at once. Arrangements are being made by Washington chess fans to conduct similar simultaneous play with him this month.

While in Washington, Dr. Alekhine is the guest of I. S. Turover, lumberman and prominent chess master. Chess players desirous of meeting the visitor in simultaneous play are invited to communicate with Mr. Turover at District 6796.

Fairfax Farmers Will Meet Tonight

Groveton School Session to Consider National Wheat Allotting.

The first of the series of meetings planned by the farmers of Fairfax County to consider the provisions of the national wheat act will be held tonight in the Groveton School under direction of a committee composed of Frank Wilkinson, George Gillingham and Lud M. Popkins.

These meetings are to be held in the various sections of the county, and County Agent Derr has requested all the farmers who produced wheat in 1930, 1931 and 1932, and who have wheat this year, to bring a record of their annual acreage, so methods may be determined on which to base the local allotment.

Other meetings scheduled are: Tomorrow night in the Oakton School, with Ronald Blake, G. Wallace Carper and Benjamin B. Iden serving as the committee; Friday night in the Centreville School, with G. M. James, John T. De Bell and Alex Haight in charge; Saturday night in the Annandale School, with Joseph Bristow, John Kearns and Julian Slade in charge.

Chamber Asks Costly School At Alexandria

Would Use $300,000 of Proposed Federal Loan Council Considers.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU,
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

The Alexandria Chamber of Commerce has gone on record as favoring the construction of a high school building with a part of the proposed $500,000 Federal loan which is being considered by the city council.

Since the State board named to pass on loans for public works under the recovery act expected to complete its organization this week, it is expected that Mayor Edmund F. Ticer soon will call a meeting of the special committee named by the council to study the proposed loan so that the committee may make its recommendations. The council has adjourned for the summer.

The council committee is understood already to have received data regarding the terms on which the loan will be made. It is expected the committee meeting will be a joint one with the school board.

Board Gets Plans.

The school board has received plans for the proposed building, which provide for a 40-room brick structure, with gymnasium and auditorium and special classrooms. At least $300,000 will be required for the building.

It is proposed, in the event of the erection of the building, to use the present Alexandria High School and the George Mason High School for graded schools, and thus relieve congestion.

The directors of the Alexandria Chamber of Commerce have decided to move its quarters from the location on North Washington street to the new Barrett Building, under construction at King and Alfred streets, provided satisfactory arrangements can be made with Robert S. Barrett, owner. The new building will contain a large room in the rear of the first floor, which is being considered by the chamber.

The chamber adopted a resolution favoring a flat automobile license fee of $5 for all passenger cars, and instructed the business manager to send a copy of the resolution to State Senator John W. Rust, Delegate J. Fred Birrell and Gov. Pollard.

Mrs. G. C. Macan, new principal of St. Agnes Episcopal School for Girls in Alexandria, has announced the following schedule for the calendar year: September 20, nonresident pupils arrive; September 21, school opens at 8:45 a. m.; November 29, Thanksgiving recess; December 4, end of holiday; December 20, Christmas holiday begins.

The Century Manufacturing Co., of Alexandria, which closed its shirt factory Monday, is said to have taken this action, pending final adoption of a code governing the industry, and it is believed the 100 women and girl employes who were laid off will be returned to work soon.

The company signed the President's reemployment agreement a week ago and placed its workers on a 40-hour week and $12 minimum wage scale, which is said to be considerably in excess of the pay heretofore received. The plant's headquarters in Baltimore, however, is said to have considered it advisable to close until the code is definitely adopted.

Vernon Wright, 26, of Jarvisburg, N. C., arraigned in Alexandria Police Court yesterday on a hit-and-run charge, was fined $50 and costs. He was charged with colliding with a parked car belonging to T. G. Dodd, in the 1000 block of Mount Vernon avenue. A charge of violating the prohibition law was dismissed, since police were unable to prove that a small quantity of liquor found in Wright's automobile was his property.

William P. Campbell, 69, died yesterday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Rich H. Bayliss, 421 Hume avenue, Alexandria. He was a retired special officer at the Potomac freight yards. The funeral will be conducted at 9:30 o'clock Friday morning, from St. Rita's Catholic Church, Mount Ida, and interment will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Strewl Jailed For O'Connell KidnapingRole

Ransom Intermediary Held While Others Are Implicated.

Monticello, N. Y., Aug. 8 (AP).—The sensational kidnaping of John J. O'Connell, jr., scion of the ruling political house of Albany, was laid to Manney Strewl and "several others" today by District Attorney John T. Delaney, of Albany.

Strewl, the intermediary who effected young O'Connell's release by handling the $40,000 ransom payment, was freed from police "protection" on an unopposed habeas corpus writ and promptly arrested as one of the alleged kidnapers.

Handcuffed to Chief.

The former convict never did actually gain freedom, having been handcuffed to the chief of Albany police, David Smurl, during the entire proceedings.

He was lodged in a cell while his custodians ate dinner and then was started back to Albany, where a sealed indictment was returned earlier in the day by the grand jury that heard O'Donnell's story of the kidnaping.

Delaney, who signed the warrant for Strewl's arrest, said he had men out looking for "several others" who might also be charged with the kidnaping.

Optimistic of Arrests.

"We haven't found them yet, but we expect to round them up soon," Delaney said.

Strewl, whose record includes two Federal prison terms, brought young O'Connell back to the Helderberg Mountain camp of his uncle, Daniel O'Connell, July 30, after delivering the ransom money in New York City.

Since then, he has been constantly in the company of policemen, travelling back and forth between Albany and New York, seeking traces of the men who took the money.

Kidnaper Given 20 Years

Carlisle, Pa., Aug. 8 (AP).—Pleading guilty to kidnaping an automobile salesman in order to steal a new car, M. M. McCreight, 40, of Cincinnati, today was sentenced to 10 to 20 years in the Eastern Penitentiary.

Police said Robert Brown, the salesman, was kidnaped and released the same night, about a year ago, by McCreight and Leroy Stringley, also of Ohio. Stringley is a fugitive.

Marine Reserves Victorious in War

Capital Group Captures Its First Objective in Quantico Maneuvers.

Washington's First Battalion of the Sixth Marine Reserves captured its first objective in maneuvers off Quantico, supervising officers reported last night.

Conducting landing operations under fire of "enemy" guns, the Washington reservists displayed skill approaching that of regulars, according to the scoring officers. Two other Washington battalions are engaged in the war games.

Giving the appearance of actual warfare, operations are conducted behind smoke screens, landing parties foray from battleship and details fire steadily on ranges. The men were praised for their work by Brig. Gen. Harry Lee, in command at Quantico.

Surviving him are his widow, Mrs. Cora L. Bartlett, the former Mrs. Cora Lumsden, and a stepdaughter, Mrs. Louis Temple, of Baltimore, widow of the late La Fayette Temple of Washington.

Verdict Voiding Will Set Aside by Luhring

A jury verdict voiding bequests made in the will of Mary E. Cook, of 485 Maryland avenue southwest, which included more than $20,000 to local Catholic institutions, was set aside yesterday when the decree of Justice Oscar R. Luhring was filed at District Supreme Court.

The will was attacked by Mrs. Ella B. Ridenour, of 2737 Devonshire place, who claimed her sister was of unsound mind when she signed the will. Attorney James B. Flynn upheld validity of the will. Justice Luhring agreed to set aside the verdict and schedule the case for another trial.

The Federal Diary

By George D. Riley.

IMAGINE our pleasure when we saw our friend, Axel H. Oxholm, lately of the abolished Wood Utilization, preparing his quarters in Lumber and Paper, Commerce. The regime is to be felicitated on finding a useful place in Government affairs for Mr. Oxholm, who has played no politics, but has hewed to the line for advancement of industry.

We take time out here to say Mr. Oxholm is that kind of man who uses his brain. It is always functioning. A twinkle shows that.

The Federal Diary had hoped the value of Wood Utilization would call for continuance of that office. We are glad Mr. Oxholm's abilities will still be obtained for governmental good.

AN omen of prosperity visited the employes of the Bulletin Section, Internal Revenue Bureau. A beautiful butterfly not of the butter-making variety, but of the silk-weaving species, made its appearance in the workrooms, and the forecast is that the employes will be wearing silk instead of cotton this winter. Miss L. E. Baker*, secretary to Deputy Commissioner W. T. Sherwood, has had experience as a scientist in zoology and in the terms of "bugology" pronounced it a male promethea moth. It is a "large American silkworm moth having the wings and body chiefly smoky brown in the male and reddish brown in the female, and suspends its cocoons from a branch by a silken band."

Elimination of wage cuts and furloughs and establishment of an equitable living minimum wage in the Federal service will be asked of Congress and the President under terms of resolutions to be offered at the National Federation of Federal Employes convention, which opens September 4, Kansas City, Mo.

Resolutions received at National headquarters from local unions throughout the country emphasize injustice of successive wage slashes and pyramiding furloughs and point out that, in addition to breaking down the Federal wage scale to a bare subsistence level, and less, the deflationist policy of the Government with respect to its own employes is completely out of harmony with the Government's constructive efforts with respect to private business and industry.

In making known the tenor of the resolutions on this subject received at National headquarters for submission to the forthcoming convention, President Luther C. Steward said:

"The inequity of forcing upon workers who already are radically underpaid further sharp reductions and furloughs is obvious enough. Equally obvious should be the inconsistency of the situation in which the Federal Government finds itself with respect to this aspect of the 'economy' program.

At lodge No. 19, A. F. G. E., Society of Federal Translators, at the Y. W. C. A. Building, President B. H. Lamore, introduced John Arthur Shaw, president A. F. G. E., who briefly summarized activities of the federation. Failure to prevent passage of legislation detrimental to interests of Federal employes was not due to inactivity of A. F. G. E., but to hostile attitude of Congress and apparent determination to pass economy legislation over all protest. It is hoped that at the September convention the A. F. G. E. will be able to consolidate forces and clarify its constitution and that the result will be an efficient and well-knit body that can champion the cause of the Federal employe vigorously and effectively. He was given a rising vote of thanks.

Mr. Lamore and Paul Vogenitz were elected delegate and alternate, respectively, to the A. F. G. E. convention next month. Two other alternates were also elected. Resignations of Alma E. Warthen and Mekkins S. Perkins were received and accepted. Johanna Hensoldt Boernsen was appointed corresponding secretary in place of Henry E. Brockway. After the meeting had adjourned the proposed formation of an association of linguists, unaffiliated with any other body and not confined to Government employes, was discussed.

The wedding of Miss Katherine Follin, A. G. O., to Mr. John Green, A. G. O., in the garden of her mother's home near Great Falls, Va., was a spectacular affair. The bride was attired in a flowing gown of white lace and carried a bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley, and the groom wore a dark coat with light trousers.

The bride's brother gave her away and her two sisters acted as maid of honor and bridesmaid. They were both dressed in white. The weather was made to order for the event and the priest performed the ceremony before a bower of flowers erected on the lawn.

About 200 friends and relatives attended, and Miss Elizabeth Cranston, A. G. O., caught the bouquet. Refreshments were served under a shower of different colored lights, and after viewing the many presents the guests began to leave. Due to the disappearance of the bridegroom's car the newlyweds did not depart for places unknown until later.

13 Espionage Plot Members Jailed in Italy

European Power Said to Be Back of Alleged Scheme; Confessions Heard.

Rome, Aug. 8 (AP).—Discovery that an espionage system has been operating in Italy three years on behalf of a European power was said today to have been revealed by secret police in investigations of an alleged espionage band, most of whose members have been arrested.

(A Rome dispatch July 20 said that the investigation was carried out coincident with the execution two months ago of Ugo Travaglia, a warrant officer who was employed in the navy ministry. He was shot in the back after conviction of espionage by a special tribunal for the defense of the state.)

The thirteenth arrest was made today when authorities detained the chauffeur of former Deputy Umberto Bianchi, who himself was reported held on suspicion of heading the band.

The others arrested were said to include Bianchi's daughters, Floretta, 18, and Bianchina, 20, Warrant Officer Dal Monti, who was serving in the air ministry, and an unnamed Russian.

Documents alleged to have been found in possession of the prisoners were reported to have revealed operations of the band as extensive and that the group was furnished large sums of money from the power involved.

Some of the prisoners were said to have confessed, but to have denied that the motive of the band was espionage, but instead that it was preparing a Communist movement.

Further arrests were said to be pending, but meanwhile the utmost secrecy was maintained.

Man, Throat Cut, Crawls to Police

Darlington, Md., Aug.8 (AP).—His throat cut and an artery in his right arm severed, John Lawrence Rennett, 32, caretaker on the estate of Mrs. Janice A. Mick, crawled to the State Police Substation here tonight. He was taken to the Havre De Grace Hospital in a critical condition. Police were unable to learn how he was hurt.

Rennett was the man who found the body of Mrs. Mick's husband, Lonnie E. Mick, on June 10 on their Harford County farm. Mrs. Mick subsequently was arrested and charged with murder, but was acquitted at Towson June 30.

200 in Montgomery Backing NRA Plans

Nearly 200 Montgomery County merchants have responded to the National Recovery Administration plan of President Roosevelt. The majority of the businesses in the county are small and the general volume of business is not large and for this reason the showing of the county is believed to be a remarkable feat.

The local postoffices have revealed that Silver Spring leads the county with 70 members, Rockville has 35 and Takoma Park about 25. Reports from Bethesda are not available, as the applications for membership were forwarded without a list being kept.

Overseas Cap

To Equip Forest Army With Headgear Popular in World War.

Shades of Hinky-Dinky Parlez Voo!

The War Department has authorized the issue of the "overseas cap" to the members of the Civilian Conservation Corps forest army.

Once again the rain will run down the soldiers' collars. Once again the sun will have its opportunity of shining without restraint into the eyes of Uncle Sam's fighters. The only difference is that this time it will be the "ax and log boys" of the C. C. C. instead of the big "bullet and bayonet men" of the A. E. F. However, the sun and the rain play no favorites.

Rivaled only by the modern pancake of milady's millinery, there is no article of headgear that can compare with the overseas cap in its uncanny powers to make the otherwise normal countenance a ridiculous appearing comic valentine.

From the majestic redwoods of the Northwest to the Florida swamps the natty but negligible skypiece of '17 will now surmount the suntanned faces of Mr. Fetchner's army of the C. C. C.

Slaying Is Laid To Kidnapers; Woman Sought

Cincinnati, Aug. 8 (AP).—A belief that kidnapers struck down and killed 27-year-old Oliver S. Baily, a leader of the younger smart set of Cincinnati society, was expressed by his relatives and friends tonight.

They thought it possible that the kidnapers found the husky young captive more than they could handle. But the police nevertheless went on hunting for a woman.

They believed they had evidence one had been with him along a wooded drive late Saturday shortly before his death.

Young Baily's wife and 3-year-old son were vacationing at Lake Placid, N. Y., and his parents were at North Port Point, Mich.

"There was no love affair," his father, George Baily, Cincinnati attorney, contended. "Some devil kidnaped him, took him to this lonely place and killed him when he resisted."

Urging acceptance of the kidnaping theory, friends pointed out that kidnapers might have intended to seek ransom from Baily's wealthy father-in-law, Jess Lippincott, president and treasurer of the Cincinnati Union Stock Yards.

The Basis for Confidence.

One of the many difficulties that beset the mind of the average business man today is that during the period of recent rapid improvement in commodity prices, volume of business, stock market prices and bond prices, everything has been put down to the administration's program. Perhaps if special credit was given to any one thing, it was to the monetary policy as it was understood. The policy consisted of embargoing gold and repudiating gold contracts, with accompanying rapidly declining gold exchange value of the dollar (which apparently it was assumed would continue indefinitely), and the prospect for ultimate devaluation of the dollar in terms of gold. All this led inevitably to speculation.

Any one supporting the policy who thought that speculation would not follow failed to understand the policy or the minds of people engaged in industry or in commodity and stock dealing. The size of inventories is a speculation in relation to future buying power and future price levels. Business reduces inventories when prices are going down, or expected to go down. Inventories are increased when prices of commodities are going up, or expected to go up. This is the A B C of business, and to expect that we can tinker with the currency and the price level and not stimulate speculation is absurd.

But the trouble now is that too much emphasis was placed on monetary policy and its related aspects. Actually there was every indication in January, February, and March, even when things were in many ways most distressing, that a basis had been laid for improvement. In spite of the repeated shocks, the commodity markets, the stock market and the bond market refused to decline. True, the level was so low that it was difficult for it to go lower, but that is the same as saying that a reversal of the long decline was due. Stock exchange loans had declined from over $8,000,000,000 to $300,000,000. How much lower could they go? Steel volume had gone down from practically 100 per cent in the 1928 period to 15 per cent. How much further could it go? Copper and cotton had both declined to below five cents, an unheard-of price in our day and generation. How could they go lower? They had to go up.

It would be more reassuring to the understanding of the business men if they were able to believe that the improvement in business was, in fact, not entirely the product of Washington-made policies, but that, on the contrary, the foundation was laid on the sound basis of supply and demand, of which we have heard so little of late, but which, strange as it may seem, still is a factor.

It would help confidence if God and the Forgotten Man were given a little credit now and then.

Right of Way in the Air.

The controversy over "how high is up" has reached much greater elevations than it attained in the old days when it referred to the upper story of a building. Today the rights of the man bird extend questions of dominion of the air from tree tops to stratosphere. A dispute is now raging in which the talent of the New York Lawyers' Association is arrayed against the legal faculties of both Harvard and the University of Pennsylvania in an attempt to determine air lane rights.

The ancient lawgivers held that everything below and above a surface holding belonged to the owner of the land. The modern contention is that not even Blackstone foresaw the use that air transport makes of the skyways, and that the exigencies of the times call for new interpretations of the rights of mere groundlings. There are many cases in the courts that can not be decided until a more definite understanding is reached as to rights in the air.

The New York lawyers represent the aviation interests in their efforts to liberalize the ancient rules and to obtain an authoritative ruling. At present the arguments center about the American Law Institute. The committee on aeronautical law of the Lawyers' Association is protesting a report submitted by professors from the two universities on laws covering airplane flight. The professors want to see the landowner sustained in his traditional ownership of overhead rights as far as man can go, or think of going.

The more modern air-minded legal lights of the metropolis hold that a landowner's rights to the space above him extend only so far as he makes actual use of it. The essence of this contention is that an airplane passing above any land or superstructure does not commit a trespass, and that if the landowner is disturbed by such a flight he has recourse to the nuisance laws. The professors hold that all flights are trespass, but that flights can be privileged. The lawyers contend that if the institute and the courts should adopt the principle of restraining flight through alleged trespass, endless litigation and confusion would result.

Fluctuating Prices.

Officials are keeping close watch on commodity prices. President Roosevelt has stated a number of times that one of his objectives is a rise in the price level, but that aspect of the recovery program is not being emphasized just now. It is feared that some prices may rise faster than purchasing power, thus nullifying the benefits of the higher wages contemplated under the NRA program. The present effort is toward coordination of prices with wage levels, employment and business activity.

A survey of commodity prices has been made by Prof. Isador Lubin, commissioner of labor statistics, showing a great disparity in the movement of prices since the depression began. Altogether 784 wholesale commodity prices are included in the study. The prices of 27 commodities, including electricity, gas and anthracite coal, actually increased during the depression. Forty-two prices have not changed since 1929, and 48 other commodities have declined in price less than 10 per cent.

From June, 1929, to February, 1933, the investigators found, the general index of commodity prices fell 37.2 per cent. By June of this year the decline amounted to only 31.7 per cent. Some groups of commodities dipped much lower than the general average. Farm products, for example, had dropped 60.4 per cent by February. Rubber had fallen 85.7 per cent, but the drop in the prices of steel, iron and cement was considerably less.

This great disparity of price declines reflects innumerable economic forces at play within the various industries. The price structure is extremely complicated. Factors that affect one commodity may not affect another. A uniform movement of prices under the NRA program, therefore, is not to be expected. Some of the economic advisers connected with the recovery program are said to contemplate lower prices for some commodities.

It is extremely difficult to set a general goal for commodity prices. If all prices should be raised to the 1926 level, some might be too high and others too low. Economic conditions in many industries have undergone great changes since 1926. Fluctuations and adjustments are inevitable.

If prices should be controlled by the National Recovery Administration it would be necessary to consider the present conditions affecting each commodity and the relations of each fixed price to the price of all other commodities. The absence of a common standard that may be applied to all industries makes widespread price-fixing extremely complicated.

Subway Transportation.

With the completion of three new links, New York City now has 840 miles of subway tracks. It is not difficult to imagine what the congestion would be if the metropolis had been obliged to handle its millions on the surface with street cars and horse-drawn vehicles. The great concentrations in skyscrapers could not have taken place. The retention of the 5-cent fare in New York has made city travel there the cheapest in the world. It is possible to ride more than 25 miles for less than one-fifth of a cent a mile.

The three subway systems in New York carry nearly 150,000,000 passengers every month. No other means of transportation could get these millions to and from work on time. The speed made by the express trains from one end of the city to the other is remarkable. For a nickel fare a passenger may take an Interborough Rapid Transit train on the White Plains road at 241st street and ride without changing to New Lots avenue in Brooklyn, a distance of 27 miles. The Sea Beach Line of the B. M. T. offers an equally long journey for 5 cents from Flushing to Coney Island. On the new branch of the Independent line, from 205th street in the Bronx, to Bergen street, Brooklyn, trains make the run of nearly 20 miles in about 45 minutes.

The crowding of the subways during rush hours is a somewhat uncomfortable experience for the uninitiated, but the regular patrons take it philosophically. It is only the novice who complains of being hustled in and out or standing in the packed cars. Discomforts are offset by the shorter time required to reach the office and to get home. On the streets there is no comparison to be made with subway time. The fastest motor must crawl with the rest. Fifth avenue's snail-like traffic at its busiest often requires three changes of lights to gain a block.

New York's subway has its disagreeable features, but the saving of time and money is a great compensation.

Questions Affecting the Pacific.

Another international conference is in session this week at Banff, Canada. It is the Institute of Pacific Relations, holding its fifth biennial meeting. The quiet attending this assemblage is probably due to the fact that, while it takes up many disputatious questions, it is unofficial and its deliberations have no direct political significance. However, economic and business leaders from virtually all the countries bordering on the Pacific are present to participate in the discussions.

The agenda of the round tables does not hesitate to list for debate such topics as naval preparedness, exclusion of Orientals by the United States, tariffs and other trade restrictions, shipping subsidies, international commodity agreements, the growth of economic nationalism, and the trend toward national and regional self-sufficiency. These far-reaching subjects will be given consideration not only through documentary matter prepared by the various countries and their speakers, but from the results of research efforts of institute committees.

American representatives at the institute are headed by Newton D. Baker, former Secretary of War. United States business interests in the Far East will have as delegates some of the leading executives in shipping and exporting circles, including J. D. Mooney, chairman of General Motors Export Corporation. Economic and scientific circles will be represented by such noted delegates as Dr. Robert A. Millikan, Henry R. Luce, Dr. Harold G. Moulton, Miss Ada L. Comstock and Dr. Owen Lattimore. Sir Herbert Samuel, former cabinet member, is chief of the British delegation. Dr. Hu Shih, the Chinese philosopher, is to represent his country, and prominent delegates are in attendance from Canada, Australia, New Zealand, Japan, the Latin-American nations, the French colonies and the Dutch East Indies, with observers present from the International Labor Office and the League of Nations. Notwithstanding its unofficial character the institute is considered of definite practical value in affording an opportunity for the candid exchange of national views and aspirations.

Maryland's Highway Program.

Out of the $400,000,000 to be expended on highway construction under the public works act, $3,564,527 is allotted to Maryland. Gov. Ritchie and the State Roads Commission have been engaged in working out a program for distribution of this fund, and it is now announced by Maj. E. Brooke Lee, a member of the commission, that the fund will be divided in three parts, as follows: One-half for the widening of Federal-aid primary highways; one-fourth for Baltimore; and one-fourth for construction of light secondary roads in the twenty-three counties.

The sections of primary highways to be widened are the stretch between Leonardtown and St. Mary's City; eight miles of the Baltimore-Annapolis boulevard, nearest Baltimore; the Bel Air road, from Baltimore to Bel Air; and the Philadelphia road, from Baltimore to Aberdeen.

Baltimore's share of the State's allotment will be used to widen East Fayette street, which becomes part of the new 150-foot boulevard through the center of the city.

All of these highways are heavily patronized by motorists from and to Washington. In that sense the improvements may be regarded as an addition to the suburban attractions and facilities of the National Capital. The proposed boulevard through Baltimore will be most convenient to motor traffic between Washington and northern cities, cutting down the time required to pass through the center of Baltimore.

Some of the light secondary roads to be constructed with 25 per cent of Maryland's allotment are tributary to Washington, and will benefit farmers in reaching market, besides opening up beautiful sections for motor travel. The construction to be undertaken primarily for the relief of unemployment will be a permanent addition to Maryland's fine road system.

Actors and Inseparable Roles.

From the Kansas City Star.

That ubiquitous and inclusive observer, O. O. McIntyre, recalls, with interesting comment, some distinguished actors and actresses who have been handicapped by too intimate identification with certain roles. A real stage career demands excellence in numerous parts, although not necessarily a wide range of characters. Versatility itself may be a handicap, for the ability to act any part well or, at least, acceptably may be accompanied by inability to act even one part greatly.

Mr. McIntyre, in going back to earlier examples, falls into error as to "The Old Homestead," which he associates with James A. Herne, when he should have named Denman Thompson. Herne's enduring money-maker was "Shore Acres," his own play, which lasted much longer than his later drama of "Sag Harbor." Thompson played "The Old Homestead" so long that those who still remember him have forgotten about everything else he did. But the most lasting combination by far was Joseph Jefferson and "Rip Van Winkle." The comedian had achieved a real reputation in many parts before he made his own version of the Sleepy Hollow story. Once on the way with "Rip," he never could turn back. He permitted seasonal interruptions by taking up old English comedies, such as "The Rivals" and "The Heir-at-Law," but the old drunkard who slept for twenty years was his gold mine, and he returned to the character that had made his fortune and could amplify it.

A particular instance of career interference was the case of Lewis Morrison, one of the most effective actors of his time. He was just gaining a national reputation based on his vivid characterizations, his remarkably melodious voice and his chaste diction, when Henry Irving brought his spectacular production of "Faust" to America. Morrison saw the possibilities of capitalizing the Irving introduction of this play by taking a version of his own far beyond the Irving field for bookings. He was so successful that he was inseparably and very disadvantageously associated with the role of Mephisto. He thoroughly disliked the part ultimately, but could not make a comparable success in anything else. Sometimes he relieved the monotony by giving another play at a matinee, as he did a performance of "Richelieu" (and an admirable performance it was) at the grand opera house in this city. It was the only time he acted the part, but he longed to star in it.

Mr. McIntyre mentions striking instances of restrictive popularity, such as that of William Gillette in "Sherlock Holmes," Jeanne Eagels in "Rain" and Olga Nethersole in "Sappho," but strangely enough he omitted David Warfield in "The Music Master."

Something They Overlooked.

The Once Over.

By H. I. Phillips.

THE TIME-PAYMENT KIDNAPING PLAN.

("Kidnapers Free Man on Credit." —Headline.)

Kidnaper (as the lady of the house answers the bell)—Good morning, could I interest you in a kidnaping?

Lady (who has become quite excited by all those kidnaping stories)—Oh, are you a kidnaper?

Kidnaper—Yes, ma'am.

Lady (a little disappointed by his appearance)—You don't look like a kidnaper. I had expected somebody more—er—more ferocious.

Kidnaper (apologetically)—Well, lady, I don't do much outside work. I'm in the booking department. I take care of the reservations.

Lady—Reservations?

Kidnaper—Yeah, business is so good you have to have a reservation, unless you're in no hurry.

Husband (coming down after listening at head of stairs)—What kidnaping agency does he represent, Ella?

Kidnaper (presenting it)—Here's our card, sir.

Husband (noting the name)—I've heard of that. It's a very good company; one of the best in the racket.

Kidnaper (proudly)—We've got influence. When you're kidnaped by us you don't have to worry about any interference from Washington.

Wife—We really ought to be kidnaped, Luther, if only to keep up appearances.

Husband—I know it, dear, but I can't afford it just now. Maybe in another month or so.

Kidnaper—Ah, but you don't need much money.

Husband—Don't need much money?

Kidnaper—As a special offer, good for ten days only, we are kidnaping clients on a time payment basis. You pay what you can at the time of the kidnaping and so much a month.

Wife (delighted)—Maybe we can afford a kidnaping after all!

Husband—That puts a different light on it. What do you want down?

Kidnaper—I can fix you up for a $25,000 kidnaping for $5,000 down and the rest in twelve monthly payments. That's with complete equipment. It covers photographs, newspaper stories, interviews and everything.

Wife—That's splendid.

Husband—Do I have to pass any physical examination?

Kidnaper—No, we accept you as a good risk.

Husband—Let me get this straight. You kidnap me on a $25,000 ransom basis and all I have to pay is $5,000 down and the rest in monthly installments.

LOVE.

I love a lass,
I love a miss
You can't surpass;

—ALBERT ELLIS.

Mr. J. B. Eastman, Federal Railroad Director, urges the railroads to put on more men quickly to aid recovery. If they show 10 per cent as much speed reemploying men for the recovery as they did dropping them for the depression the result will be fairly breath-taking.

There is some disagreement whether President Roosevelt's ancestral home is at Hyde Park or Krum Elbow. Why not compromise and call it either Hyde Elbow or Krum Park?

He Has No Right to Burn His Grass If He Can't Keep the Fire at Home

By Robert Quillen.

DOES it seem to you reasonable and right that your income, the worth of your property and the welfare of your family should be affected by the whims of some stranger who gets his living by playing poker?

It does not, of course. Yet you endure an arrangement very similar to that.

Some weeks ago, when Government schemes had given some assurance of rising prices, the pulse of the nation quickened to an old familiar excitement.

It was the gambling fever. In every hamlet, village and town the knowing ones collected their savings and made first payment on a share in the new boom.

Stock prices and paper profits mounted higher and higher, supported by nothing more substantial than the imagination of buyers, and then inevitably fell when professional traders were ready for the shearing.

What was the effect on innocent by-standers? Well, they were told that rising prices had added billions to the nation's wealth. Every man't property was worth a little more. Prosperity was on the way back and everybody was cheerful.

Then the collapse came; the Natiqn was poorer by billions of dollars; every man's property and prospects kept pace with falling stocks; people again lost heart.

When anybody criticizes the stock market, its defenders offer convincing arguments to show that it is necessary.

But does anybody contend that necessity justifies gambling with the Nation's security?

If unwise people still hope to get wealth without earning it, they have a right to take a chance and lose their savings in whatever manner affords them the most pleasure.

But the public has a right to interfere when the gambler's folly affects the property and prosperity of everybody else.

The "New Deal" promised by this administration has ended many evils and abuses. Why should it tolerate the evil that was chiefly responsible for the destruction of the old order.

Killing ants in the kitchen does little good if you don't find the ant hill in the yard.

Political Comment

Purchasing and the Price Level.
St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Purchasing is a necessary part of the recovery program, but we believe it will be the easiest hurdle. If the country is assured of a reasonably prosperous future, of a sharp diminution in the ranks of unemployed and of higher wage standards all along the line, there will be plenty of purchasing. The only obstacle to this end would seem to be a price level that has got out of hand. How high are prices going? Will they go to the point that will desperately retard the recovery program?

President Roosevelt and Gen. Johnson are keenly aware of this possibility. When he signed the recovery act, the President especially called attention to it. "If we now inflate prices as fast and as far as we increase wages," he said, "the whole project will be set at naught. We can not hope for the full effect of this plan unless, in these first critical months, even at the expense of full initial profits, we defer price increases as long as possible."

It Becomes "Norris Dam."
Kansas City Times.

To Senator Norris, of Nebraska, go congratulations for the honor accorded him by the Tennessee Valley Authority in giving his name to the great Cove Creek Dam which shortly is to be built to help round out the Muscle Shoals development. It is to be "Norris Dam," just as it is "Wilson Dam" at the Shoals and "Hoover"—beg pardon—"Boulder Dam" down on the Colorado. It is to be Norris Dam in recognition of the senator's twelve-year contest for Government operation of the Shoals project and of his long-standing interest in related matters.

In Driest Kansas.
New York Sun.

Among States mentioned as being least likely to vote for repeal of the eighteenth amendment, bone dry Kansas is usually first. To persons superficially acquainted with the folkways of Kansas it might seem that even that State is wavering. But Kansas has always seemed to be wavering—until it came time to vote. Prohibition in law if not in fact seems to be less the result of convinction there than of habit

Spreading Work.
Houston Post.

Admiral Standley estimates that for every man given employment directly in shipyards in the construction of new warships four will be put to work in allied industries, and that every State in the Union will receive some benefit from the naval construction program now getting under way.

Building of the 37 war vessels, it is declared, will absorb all the experienced shipbuilding labor in the country. The Navy building program, therefore, will take care completely of the unemployment problem of the shipbuilding trades, trades which contain a large number of highly skilled men. That will help greatly in restoring purchasing power and increasing business in coast cities where ships will be built.

Just Folks.

By Edgar A. Guest.

Little Miss Carol.

I met Miss Carol at the Fair,
A dainty miss, with golden hair
As lovely as a yellow rose
Which in my little garden grows;
And I will vow, from head to feet
As delicate and just as sweet.
She dropped a curtsy as we met—
A gracious act I shan't forget.

Now there I stood 'mid buildings proud
Among a constant surging crowd
Which strove to look at wonders new
And all the works our wise men do;
But I stood still, as past they filed,
Enraptured by a little child.
On all that great Enchanted Isle
Was naught so wondrous as her smile.

The Hall of Science fairly teemed
With things accomplished men have dreamed;
But still I thought amid this whirl
Of marvels, here's a little girl
Just eight years old, who's lovelier far
Than all these dazzling splendors are.
The prettiest vision at the fair
Is little Carol smiling there.

Along the Potomac

With

Carlisle Bargeron

IT is too bad that Jim Farley's speech to the Young Democrats last night had to be made over the radio. Naturally he had to talk down to them, to tell them bedtime stories and to speak in terms which we use with our children at home. One appreciates what he was up against, what the occasion of his speech was.

Bargeron.

But he should have got the youngsters behind closed doors as I do when I tell my one about how, when I go in the surf, I always swim out to the steamers 10 miles from shore only to find the boat removed and have to swim back again. In fairness to this youngster, though, I should say that she knows it is a joke and laughs heartily. I am afraid the Young Democrats will not take what Jim had to say that way.

But the unfortunate part about it is that by going on the radio a lot of grown-ups naturally heard him and as a result Jim lost wholly that reputation for genial frankness which he had built up.

* * * *

NOTHING that I have ever read was more engaging in its frankness than Jim's piece in the American Magazine about his philosophy on the distribution of patronage. It was the absolute truth and when one read it he thought of what dumbbells the Republicans had been in trying to make such a great mystery of it. But on the radio last night Jim lost caste.

Listen to this one passage:

"No attempt is being made to set up a supergovernment over business or industry, but simply to give them the opportunity to govern themselves under the principles and purposes of the recovery program.

"As a matter of fact, the national recovery act is a new declaration of independence for business to manage its own affairs under ethical codes, to promote social justice between employer and employe and to open up new fields for initiative and efficiency."

* * * *

NOW it is not necessarily to criticize the undertaking that is going on to say that the paragraph is packed with bunk, pure and unadulterated bunk.

As we go through this thing we may as well make an effort to keep the record straight, to try to do some clear thinking even as we may realize, or may not, that what is being done is necessary to the restoration of prosperity.

There is nothing voluntary about the administration's decrees, its blanket codes and whatnot. And there is not a business man in the country who thinks there is. There is, indeed, not a single business man who is not experiencing one of three emotions.

There is one class that never thinks at all and is going along mechanically. There is the second class that figures that the way to sell goods is to get on the bandwagon of everything that comes along, and finally there is the third class that is fundamentally opposed to what is being attempted, but is afraid that if it fights it will be put out of business.

Nowhere is there anything voluntary about it and for every one business man I find who even makes an attempt to show enthusiasm there are 10 who find difficulty in restraining their speech.

It so happens that but a few hours before Jim made his speech the newspapers were carrying headlines "NRA delinquents given two weeks or get boycott." That's how voluntary this thing is.

* * * *

REGARDLESS of the merits of it, does any one for one moment think that those business men who have spent millions of dollars to get from under the yoke of organized labor—for one reason or another, because of the impossible relations with the particular labor leader with which they were dealing, or for downright selfishness or for any purpose whatsoever—does anyone think that these business men now are willing to throw away this investment and to accept willingly the administration's program?

Is it possible on this mundane sphere for mere man to overnight become so unselfish? Obviously it is not.

And there is plenty of grumbling going on. Any speech by Jim or any of the rest of them that gayly dismisses this is not the frankness about which the incumbent crowd brags.

It is ballyhoo and this particular piece for Jim could not have been written by that dean, Charlie Michaelson. I think, in fact, that it must have been got up by the head of the Young Democrats, young Dickie Roper himself.

He should have been permitted to deliver it and at one of those dances which they are always having. On a party it would have been fun.

AMERICA B. C.

Whether the first human creatures roamed the wilds of Africa 20,000,000 years ago or whether man first appeared in the Gobi Desert or some other region remains a puzzle on which geologists never cease to ponder, remarks the New York Sun. The controversy on man's first home does not overshadow in interest a report on ancient American culture presented by Dr. Barnum Brown, of the American Museum of Natural History. Digging in their native soil, anthropologists of the United States turn up some of the most fascinating puzzles known to students of prehistoric man.

When a quarry near Folsom, N. M., was examined the remains of extinct buffalo were found.

Mounds in Kentucky have yielded skeletons and the remains of ancient dwellings believed to mark the site of a town which thrived in the South in 1068 B. C.

Dickie's Secret
My daddy said some awful thing
That made my mother cry,
An' then he hurried off to work
A-steppin' pretty high!
But just before we had our lunch
A boy came to the door;
He handed us a great long box,
An' mother cried no more.
For when she took the cover off
There lay big roses red,
An' on a card, "For Sweetheart—Tom."
"Dear boy!" my mother said.
So then we fixed the roses up,
An' daddy came at night;
When mother ran right up to him
He grabbed an' hugged her tight
"Across the street or across the miles, after the 'storm' of words—send her a 'rainbow' of Gude's Flowers!"

Picturesque Corby Home in Chevy Chase Has Old English Architectural Motif

Oak Panels Are Features in Other Rooms; Art Is Shown.

Homes are so much more than just houses. They reflect the originality, the tastes, the ingenuity of their owners. The following article is the first of a series which will describe especially individual Washington homes. The sequence will include large houses, small houses, country houses, town houses, even some interesting apartments, but all homes of distinction. The Washington Post presents this series with the belief that it will be of especial interest to home makers.

By Mary Law Harris.

Out at Chevy Chase Circle, behind tall hedges, is a picture of sixteenth century England, sun-mellowed and soft-colored.

It is the William S. Corby home, a timbered house, gabled and with casements of leaded glass, quite in the architectural mode that prevailed in the reign of Good Queen Bess.

Its setting of formalized parterres, box plants clipped into quaint bird shapes and velvety lawn are, too, all authentically Elizabethan. The southern front overlooks a sunken water garden, bright with lilies, bordered with monthly roses.

The interior of the home also is in the manorial manner—panelings of darkened oak, huge tapestries patiently worked hundreds of years ago, splendid paintings, carven furniture—reflects the spacious and easy living of Shakespeare's England.

Music Room Huge.

But the center and keynote of the Corby home is the music room. It is of generous size, two stories in height. At one end is the great pipe organ, which is supplemented by an unseen echo organ and an antiphonal organ. At the other end is a tremendous leaded glass window, also two stories high, centered with a heraldic device in stained glass, and overlooking the blossomy lily pond.

The softened colors of vast antique tapestries, the varying sunset tones of some of Lucien Powell's finest canvases, the glint of Florentine armor, combine in a setting ideal for listening to the harmonies of a Beethoven sonata, a Chopin waltz or the rollicking airs of "The Beggar's Opera." A Broadway tune would be sacrilege in such surroundings.

Additional light is given the room by the patterned treatment of the beamed ceiling, golden tones predominating. The chandeliers are in gold and polychrome and bear carved figures of the Apostles. Balconies from the second story open over east and west side walls.

The music room is said to be even more attractive in the holidays, with clusters of gay holly and a tall tree sparkling against the tiny leaded panels of the big window.

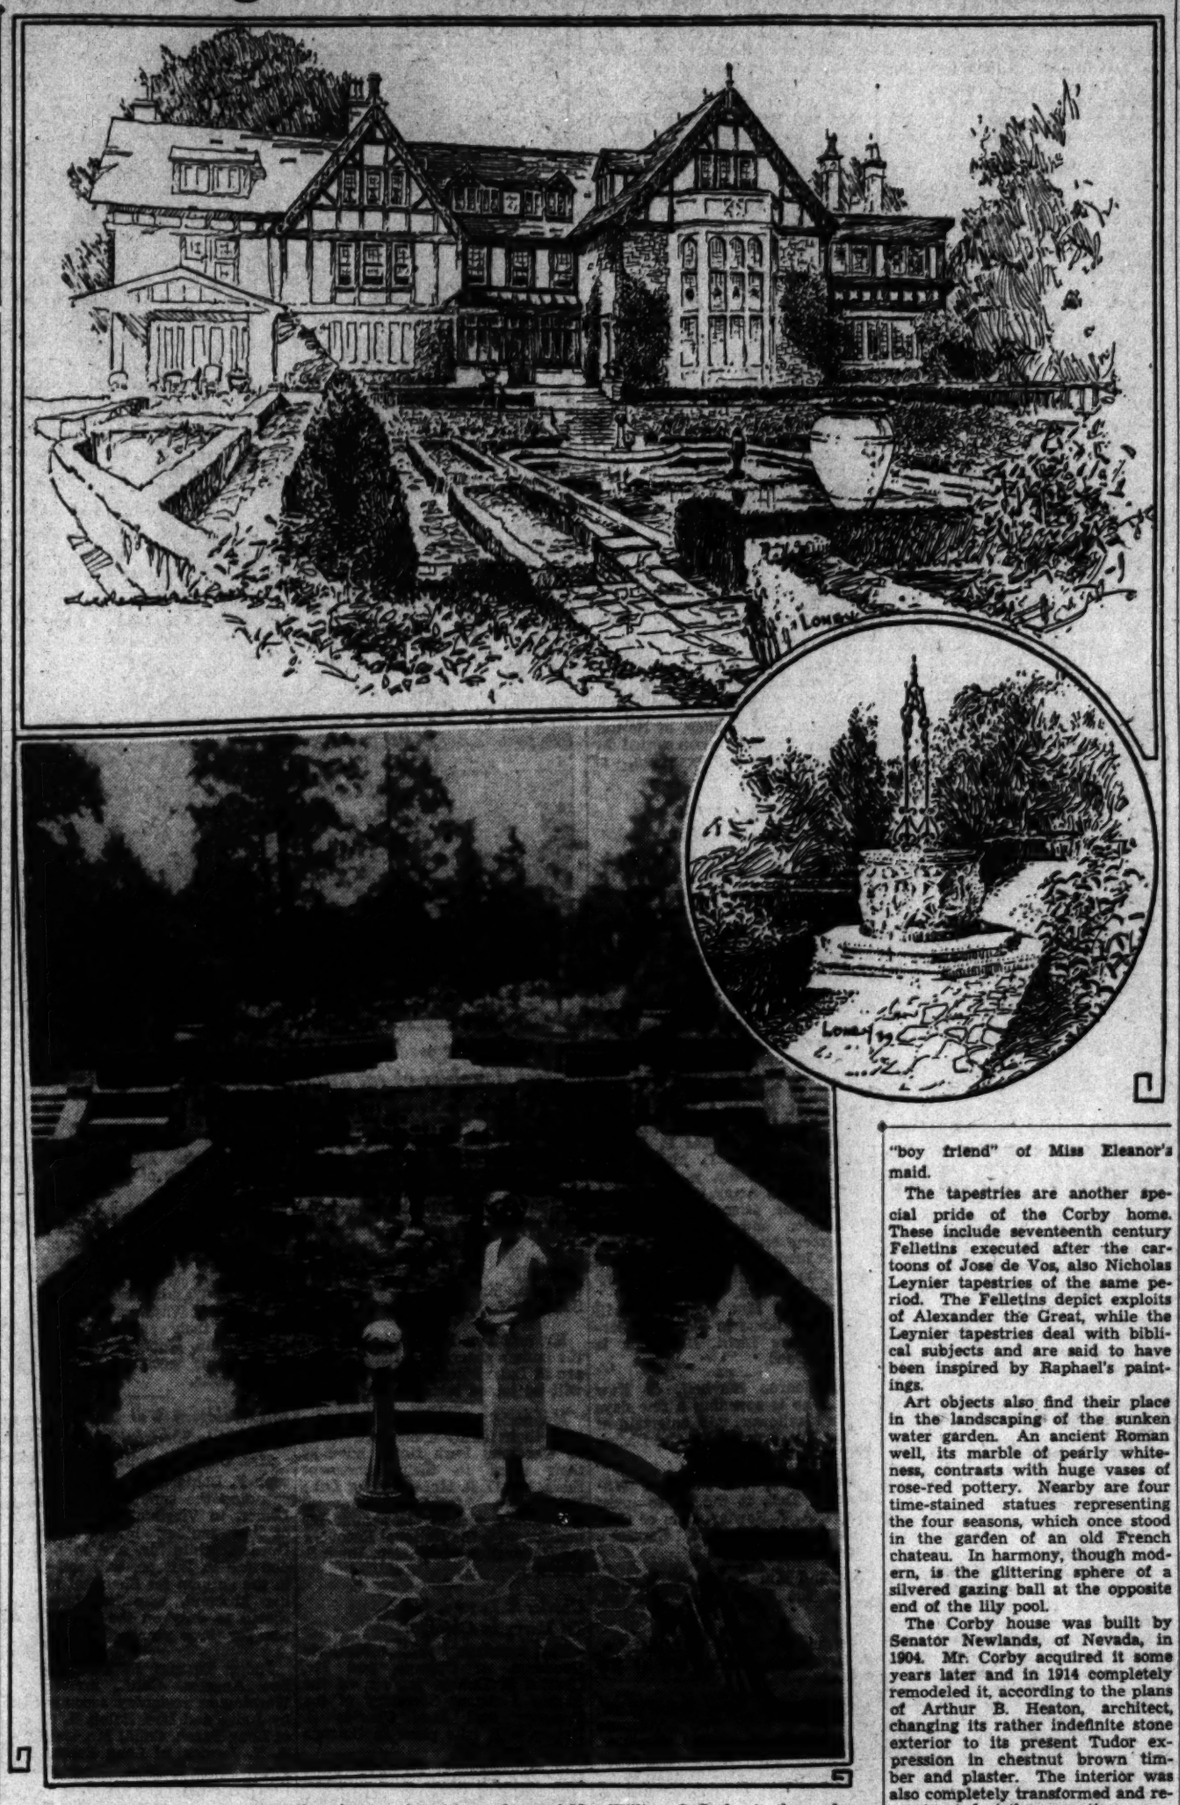
Oak Panels Featured.

With the exception of the cream-paneled Adam dining-room, the first floor rooms of the Corby home are all finished in oak paneling. But different treatments make each room individual.

In the library the darkly rich book bindings form a color treatment for the walls. The oak ceiling is of long narrow panels, each outlined with a narrow dull molding.

The drawing-room walls are oak paneled with the ceiling formed of an intricate arabesque in plaster, finished with a yellowish ivory dull lacquer. A "homey" touch is lent here by the full-length portraits of the Corby daughters, Eleanor and Justine, painted when they were girls of 10 and 12.

The drawing-room opens on an exquisite little conservatory filled with exotics, its marble pool bright with gold fish, glass bubbles in green and yellow and water-polished shells.



Miss Eleanor Corby (above), gifted sculptress, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William S. Corby, in the sunken water garden of their home at Chevy Chase Circle. At top, the Tudor timbered house of Mr. and Mrs. William S. Corby nestles behind high hedges at Chevy Chase Circle. In circle, an ancient Roman well, its weather-polished carving dating back to the Caesars.

Separating a business man from his office is sometimes more than difficult. Mr. Corby (or Mrs. Corby?) has had an inspiration along this line. Mr. Corby has a "home office."

Cartoons on Walls.

It is a pleasant little oak-paneled room off the library. A finely-carved desk offers facilities for taking care of out-of-office-hours work, but is not at all grimly business-like in appearance.

The walls are literally covered with original cartoons by well-known artists, certificates of club memberships and the like. Indicative of a father's natural pride are the graduation certificates of his daughters. Another interesting personal touch is the bronze tablet bearing Lincoln's Gettysburg address which hangs in a little entresol adjoining the office.

Appearing in various rooms are finely done pieces of modern sculpture. These are the work of Eleanor Corby and bear testimony to her talent. They are executed with expertness and insight, are modern but not modernistic. In the music room is a beautiful torso in gold mounted on black marble, its lines so smooth and flowing as to suggest the work of Paul Manship. The plaster head of a young girl appears in the window of Mr. Corby's office, an aluminum finished girl's head is in the drawing room, while in an adjoining passage is the bronze head of a young Negro. This last was posed for by the "boy friend" of Miss Eleanor's maid.

The tapestries are another special pride of the Corby home. These include seventeenth century Felletins executed after the cartoons of Jose de Vos, also Nicholas Leynier tapestries of the same period. The Felletins depict exploits of Alexander the Great, while the Leynier tapestries deal with biblical subjects and are said to have been inspired by Raphael's paintings.

Art objects also find their place in the landscaping of the sunken water garden. An ancient Roman well, its marble of pearly whiteness, contrasts with huge vases of rose-red pottery. Nearby are four time-stained statues representing the four seasons, which once stood in the garden of an old French chateau. In harmony, though modern, is the glittering sphere of a silvered gazing ball at the opposite end of the lily pool.

The Corby house was built by Senator Newlands, of Nevada, in 1904. Mr. Corby acquired it some years later and in 1914 completely remodeled it, according to the plans of Arthur B. Heaton, architect, changing its rather indefinite stone exterior to its present Tudor expression in chestnut brown timber and plaster. The interior was also completely transformed and reconstructed at the same time.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Malarial Hematuria.

PHYSICIANS who practice in intensely malarial regions are very much interested in a disease known as malarial hematuria. Although far less common than it once was, this malignant form of malaria is still a source of great apprehension to the people and the subject of debate among physicians.

It generally develops between the latter part of October and the first of February, and the people who have it are usually those who remained in the malarial section all summer and autumn and who have suffered several attacks of malaria. For each attack they have taken quinine and calomel. As a rule they have taken enough quinine to break up each attack, but have not continued antimalarial medication between attacks. After several months of such experiences they develop pernicious malaria, in which there is bloody urine.

Being so clearly malarial in origin, the temptation to give quinine is strong, but long and bitter experience has proved that quinine given to a case of malarial hematuria in the acute stage precipitates an attack of hematuria with a severe destruction of the blood. Between the evident need of quinine and the danger of giving it, the physician has been in great perplexity.

There are some new facts that may help him out of his dilemma. The most important one is that quinine should not be given during the bleeding stage of the disease, however much it appears to be needed. To control temporarily the malarial part of the disorder they use atebrin, and, in some cases, plasmochin compound. After a few days, the hematuria phase having been passed, quinine may be given in full doses. It is safe enough then and is needed.

The patients who are in this hematuria stage are given as much water as their stomachs will contain without nausea. This is supplemented by various kinds of injections of fluids—salt solutions, glucose solutions and such.

It is not thought that acidosis is present in this stage, and treatment with alkalis for acidosis is not helpful.

It has been observed that cases of hematuria develop about the same place and about the same time. In intensely malarial regions certain neighborhoods have a reputation for hematuria. Physicians of experience know that at about a certain time of the year hematuria may be expected to appear among the residents of those neighborhoods. Observations have proved the correctness of this old notion. Furthermore, the disease has some tendency to spread among the occupants of one house or one collection of houses. There are some peculiarities of the malarial parasite which explain these fairly well-known and widely accepted notions.

During the acute attack quinine is not given because of the danger that it may precipitate hematuria. But a few days later it is substituted for atebrin or plasmochin, whichever has been used. Thereafter for several weeks quinine and the other antimalarial remedies are alternated until the body is rid of the parasites. There should be a follow-up treatment consisting of iron tonics, good food and protection against infected mosquitoes.

Insulin.

M. D. G. writes: Is there any other medicine besides insulin that is just as good for diabetes?

Reply.

There is no substitute for insulin for those who need it. Many cases of diabetes do not need it.

Sons of Prominent Families Holding Interesting Jobs on Johnson's Staff

Heir of General Electric President Is Preparing "Battle Front" Map.

Son of Ambassador Straus Is Promoted Since Joining NRA.

The progeny of political and industrial leaders of America is represented on the NRA staff here by John Swope, son of the General Electric millions, and Robert K. Straus, son of the Ambassador to France.

Young Mr. Swope, 24, and filled with enthusiasm, is busily engaged in the preparation of a "battle front" map showing the gains of the NRA armies of women and men as they fight the battle against the depression throughout the Nation.

Although only on the job two weeks, he expects to have all 1,200 battle fronts, which are the city organizations throughout the country, marked in red within a short time.

On Ground Floor of NRA.

Mr. Straus, 28, has been with the recovery administration since its inception. He started out as assistant to Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, but has been promoted to the position of secretary of the President's Reemployment Agreement Policy Board. And is he busy? Too busy to stop long enough to release a studio portrait for publication!

John Swope, left, son of Gerard Swope, president of General Electric, and Robert K. Straus, son of Jesse Isador Straus, ambassador to France, hold positions on the NRA staff here.

Both these young administrators are Harvard men. Swope was graduated in 1930. Straus took his degree three years earlier.

Although both men had their academic cradle in the same New England institution, their subsequent steps toward positions of prominence in the NRA were by different roads.

Straus studied in Paris, the present home of his ambassador father. He was there for two years, returned, looked about him for a time, and then settled in the NRA.

Swope, heir to the General Electric holdings of his father, Gerard, to say nothing of the political mantle which has descended upon that family, spent a year traveling throughout the world after leaving Harvard.

Interested in Theater.

Returning to his home land he took an active part in the drama, being associated as director, actor and manager of the University Players Guild. This group played last winter in Baltimore.

This did not end Swope's interest in the theater. Subsequently he became associated with the RKO interests of New York, and was active in the management and distribution phases of the industry.

Pausing between dabs of red, which marked the latest successes of the NRA field force, Swope explained his reason for joining the NRA staff.

"It's being in the thick of things," he said, as he puffed rapidly at his briar pipe. "We're seeing history made. We're helping make history.

"Here in the midst of a great emergency, we have a ring side seat, if nothing else, at this tremendous, revolutionary, outstandingly successful——"

He opened an incoming telegram and placed another red dot in the vicinity of Des Moines.

Young Housewife Finds Solution to Dishwashing Problem After Entertaining

Dish Problem Met by Paper Bridge Sets

By Ann Davis.

The young housewife bowed her head in despair. Stacks of dirty dishes glowered at her from the sink. Soiled table cloths and napkins menaced her from all sides.

But she was a modern young woman, and the drudges of housekeeping were problems to be solved, not endured.

Before the next party she stopped by a department store, and selected a paper bridge ensemble which included four cups with handles, saucers, plates, lacy napkins and a matching 36-inch table cloth.

They came wrapped with celophane with dresden designs of Marie Antoinette figures. Price, 20 cents. Packages of extra plates, 10 cents.

It had all the earmarks of antiquity, this needle-point stool. The handmade cover was the source of much admiration.

A great many people said, "A genuine period piece! You can always tell, can't you?"

And others, "My grandmother had one just like it!"

The owner smiled to herself. She might have said, "In an F street store for $2.50," but she didn't.

An Oriental potentate surveyed his chess board with unbounded pride. He fingered the finely-wrought pieces as he admired the workmanship.

Centuries later, a designer read of the great ruler's chess set and deplored the fact that such splendor had passed.

"There is love of beauty now as well as then," he told himself. "I will pattern one after his."

He made the men from petrified goat's milk, and colored them red and white. He carefully inlaid the board with rosewood, satinwood and ebony, and polished it with oil. When he had finished he viewed the artistic whole with satisfaction. On sale in an F street store.

Fall not only means new frocks, fur coats, and autumnal shades, but rug washing as well. The surest way to prevent your fine Orientals from deteriorating is to keep them thoroughly clean.

A Connecticut avenue shop specializes in this, going over the whole rug by hand. Six cents a square foot for Orientals, 5 cents for domestics.

She had been so proud of him up to this very moment. But when he pulled out the worn old bill fold her heart sank. Its leather cover was faded and scratched and the lining hung in shreds.

He was so distinguished looking in his oxford grey suit and pearl grey hat. His shoes and manner bespoke the polished gentleman. The waiter had been impressed, and so had she—until then.

But the bill fold told the tale. If he had only known that for three dollars he could buy one of hand tooled genuine cowhide that would last him a lifetime! But now he sits by his fireside alone, for she has married someone else.

Gingham isn't merely gingham any more. It's the source of designs for cigarette cases, compacts, and now breakfast sets. A large Washington store which has floors and floors of glassware, china, gift selections, and furniture, is showing a thirty-two piece set which includes everything from cream pitcher and sugar bowl to a large meat platter, in a fine grade of English porcelain. The borders of the pieces resemble gingham, in blue, orange, or green. Price, $7.50.

By Amos Parrish.

If you want to shine in the fashion world, wear satin. And wear it right now in the August sunshine when its gleam makes a vivid contrast with the dull finished fabrics of most summer daytime dresses.

And when we say satin, it almost goes without saying that it's black satin we mean.

Effective Contrast.

But most fashionable women prefer black. And certainly black makes the most effective contrast against that background of mid-summer pastels.

And the majority of these black satins are jacket costumes. A dress with a hip length jacket. Or with one in swagger length. Or even a quite fitted, link button jacket that makes the costume look almost like a tailored suit.

Tailored Lines.

Most of these new dresses are fairly tailored anyway. Quite simple in line, depending more on the fabric than on intricate detail for smartness.

Skirts are straight, sometimes pleated, sometimes slightly gored; necklines fairly high about the throat.

The jacket usually displays those same broad shoulders you've been seeing on other jackets and which, in different versions, are going to keep right on being fashionable this fall.

Broadening Details.

Peak folded sleeves, such as you see in the sketch, are favorites. And padded or stiffened tops, flanges and epaulets make others interesting to look at.

Of course, if you prefer a more formal black satin . . . the luncheon or afternoon type . . . you'll find those, too, very smartly represented.

They'll be one-piece dresses usually with short sleeves, soft girdles and draped neck lines. Occasionally a long-sleeved one shows up, but for immediate wear the others are cooler, of course.

Glaring Light Causes Squint Lines at Eyes

Sunglass Protection Is Effective Against Many Glares.

By Elsie Pierce.

Year in, year out, regardless of season the eyes have a mighty trying time of it. In the winter they are taxed by artificial light. In the summer, there's the expanse of white sand on the beach, the glare of the sun.

Few women are wise enough to wear sunshade, visor or sunglasses. They continue, the majority of them, to squint at Old Sol. Bad for the eyes. Ruinous to the youthful appearance of the face, too, because squinting causes wrinkles.

Wear Sunglasses.

On the beach, or when motoring or otherwise facing the sun's glare, wear sunglasses. There are all sorts of inexpensive ones to be had and these are better than none at all. Though I do believe that it is well worth investing in a pair fitted to one's personal needs.

The eyes deserve the best sunglasses you can give them. A reputable optometrist will fit a pair to your eyes for little more than the cheap glasses turned out by the thousands. The individually fitted glasses will not only help you avoid squinting, they will actually rest your eyes.

Rest Your Eyes.

To rest your eyes, look out into the distance several times a day. That is a splendid relaxation exercise for them. Blinking is better than rubbing the eyes and is actually restful, too.

Palming is another way of soothing tired eyes. Close your eyes and very gently press the palms over the lids.

When eyes are tired or inflamed, particularly after a day in the open or a motor trip, use an eyewash. To a glass of boiled water add a pinch of salt, enough to make the water taste slightly salty. Use this eyewash with eyecup. Boracic acid, a teaspoonful dissolved in a pint of boiled water, is another excellent eyewash.

Cream and Oil

For the delicate tissue around the eyes, a heavy cream or oil (castor oil is excellent), should be used generously during the summer, particularly if sunglasses are not worn. Pat the cream or oil on gently and leave a thin film on while on the beach or golf course, tennis court, &c. This will keep the squint lines from settling permanently.

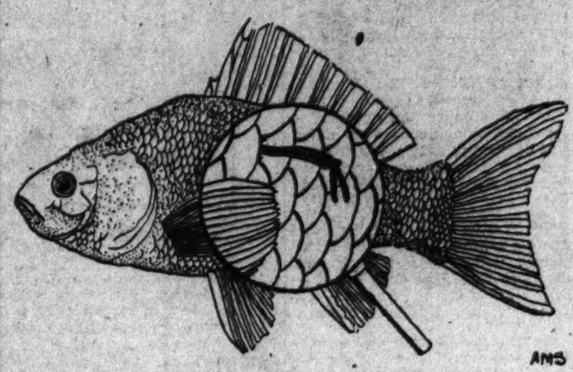
Parasite Devastates Fish Pools; Cure Is Difficult



Invader from Japan bores under scales of helpless fish. It must be pulled off. Enlarged portion of drawing shows parasite attached to host.

More than 100 telephone calls were received during the past week in the U. S. Bureau of Fisheries from frantic fish lovers, demanding information to help them save their prized fish.

The parasite attaches itself to the fish, bores under the scale and makes a living, permanent host of the helpless fish. These parasites multiply rapidly. Unless prompt treatment is given, the fish die.

According to Fred Orsinger, director of the Bureau of Fisheries aquarium here, the only remedy known is to pick the parasites off the fish much in the same manner that a tick is picked off an animal.

Parasite Hard to Combat.

"Few of the people whose fish are attacked by these vicious parasites know what is wrong until their fish begin to die," said Mr. Orsinger. "The parasite is like a slender, boring needle, about a quarter of an inch long, and will not be noticed unless the fish is taken out of the water and examined. And there is no way to help the fish other than lifting them out of the water and pulling the parasites loose."

This operation should be done carefully, Mr. Orsinger warned. Pick up the fish in a wet cloth, hold it carefully, and remove the parasites with tweezers. This operation should be performed again and again, until the pest disappears from the pool.

Came from Japan.

The parasite is believed to have been introduced into Washington pools through a shipment of fancy Japanese gold fish received some months ago.

The scientific name for the parasite is Lernaeocera tortua. This species should not be confused with Argulus, or fish louse, which is a free agent in the water of fish ponds and does not attach itself permanently to the fish.

The Japanese parasite multiplies rapidly. Each female carries two egg sacks which are fertilized by a male of the species, which becomes a parasite on the female. The eggs detach and float in the water until hatched. Within a short time after hatching, the young parasites attach themselves to a fish, and the vicious cycle continues.

Child May Bite Nails to Win Parent's Notice

Or Nervousness May Cause Unpleasant Habit to Persist.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

If good habits were learned as easily as bad, life would be a very much simpler problem than it is. To the average parent it sometimes seems as if children deliberately avoided learning anything desirable and hunted out every unpleasant trick and mannerism to add to their stock in trade.

One of the commonest and most unpleasant of these tricks is nail-biting. What makes it so difficult to cope with is that is has a number of causes, and to cure the symptom is impossible unless the underlying cause is uncovered.

With most children nail-biting is nervousness. If it is merely a passing condition of strain or over-tiredness it may be enough to call attention to the ugliness of bitten fingers. If the cause of the trouble is deeper-seated the first thing is to talk it over frankly with the child. Let him see that you are trying to help and that only candor on his part can be of any use.

He generally will respond to such treatment if convinced of an honest desire to help on the part of the adult. I have known children to bite their nails in an effort to attract attention, feeling that a reproof is preferable to insignificance. Whatever the cause, the habit is very difficult to break, and requires time and endless patience.

The one cure that will not work is nagging, for this arouses resistence in the child which will eventually increase the force of the habit. Do nothing at all rather than nag. There is always the hope that adolescence may work the cure unaided. For with the increased interest in personal appearance which usually emerges at that time much of the untidiness and carelessness of childhood disappear.

If the child's interest in overcoming the habit has been aroused his new vanity will now finish the work that you began.

By Mary Blake.
"Leo."

If August 9 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 11:20 a. m. to 12 noon, from 5:45 to 6:30 p. m. and from 8 to 9:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 8 to 9:15 a. m. and from 3 to 4:30 p. m.

Influences operating on this date will tend to make people overbearing and boastful. It will not be a day conducive to modesty and few people will be restrained and retiring in their meetings with others. Children will be tempted to wander away from home in their play and will act in total disregard of danger.

The child born on this August 9 will in all probability have a stimulating personality and will bring much inspiration to his parents. The spiritual and beautiful nature of this child will force them to be constantly on their toes striving to set him a good example. A cheerful little one who seldom whines.

If August 9 is the date of your birth, you are a shrewd business person, and a difficult one to outsmart in any kind of a deal. You are essentially honest to the core, but you know the "tricks of the trade" and are well able to look after your own interests. There is no assurance that you will be rich or well to do, but you should never lack, for you are sufficiently aggressive to go out and get what you need. Money will probably never mean a great deal to you, and unless spurred on by a mate who demands much, you will never make the acquisition of gold your goal.

Born on August 9, you generally try to be a friend to all who come your way. Once you have fully accepted anyone, it is difficult for them to get out of your good graces; however, once they have given you cause to seriously frown upon them, they immediately lose your support, and this for all time. There is no coming back. You are a person who undoubtedly likes to be active in your community. You enjoy membership in clubs, lodges and church, and you support them all actively. Particularly are the women ardent supporters of this and that organization. They like to be up and doing things and meeting people.

The Family Marketer

By Hoyt Barnett.

Locally grown string beans are very good. When you buy some be sure they look fresh and round. Those with the squashed appearance have been shipped and are not so tender.

Lima beans, already shelled for your convenience, are selling at low prices. From a nutritive standpoint these are hard to beat. Both the string beans and lima beans may be warmed up for subsequent meals and seem to gain flavor each time—providing they were cooked right in the first place.

And speaking of how to cook string beans—buy a nickel's worth of so-called "western meat" and drop into the pot with 25 cents' worth of beans. The bean pot also is a good way to utilize a ham shank.

Weather Improves Corn.

The cooler weather of the past few days has improved the quality of the corn-on-the-cob. But don't try to get the biggest ears on the market. They are the toughest. Try some that are no more than 5 inches long and well filled with small kernels.

A good assortment of cold meats awaits the careful shopper, who is anxious to avoid the heat of a stove at dinner time. Some of the best are cold baked ham, roasted fresh pork and cold cuts of veal loaf. These, of course, are the old-line favorites.

And while on the subject of loaf—buy a pound of ground pork and two pounds of ground beef for a total of 40 cents. Mix in a little bread, an egg, some chopped onions and a cup of milk. Bake it and serve two meals to a family of six. Cheap, easy to make and very good to eat. Don't forget—a piece of ground brisket is cheaper and better for this loaf than ground round steak.

Butter is a cent higher in most stores.

Buy Melons Now.

Cantaloupes and watermelons are cheap and the quality is excellent. This is the time to take advantage of the peak of the season. The round melons have more heart. Those from the Carolinas and Florida are sweet and juicy.

The best peas on the local market are the telephone variety from California. Most shipments are coming through in good condition.

Young baking chickens still are too high priced for the economical housewife. Frying chickens are in season. Wait a few weeks before insisting upon the baking sizes.

Retail Food Prices.

Eggs—Government inspected, 29 to 30; extras, 24 to 26; loose, mediums, 21 to 23.
Butter—Prints, 31 to 33; tub, 29 to 31.
Poultry—Broilers, 25 to 31; friers, 26 to 31 per lb.; young baking chickens, 28 to 33 per lb.; heavy hens, 20 to 26 per lb.; medium hens, 18 to 23 per lb.; light hens, 18 to 23 per lb.
Potatoes, 3 to 4 per lb.
Carrots, 7½ per bunch.
Beets, 5 per bunch.

Lamp Shades Have Summer Covers.

Easy to make are the new lamp shade covers of white or pale yellow crepe paper. Sturdy, practical, and inexpensive, they solve the housewife's problem of how to protect her fine lamp shades from summer dust. You simply cut from your fold of crepe paper, across the grain, a strip wide enough to cover the shade and long enough to fold into loose pleats. Then you cut or punch tiny holes about an inch from the top of the strip of crepe paper and draw a narrow cord in and out of the holes. When you place the cover on the lamp shade, you adjust it to the desired size and tie the cord. These covers look so charming that many housewives will be glad to use them over wire frames as summer lamp shades.

What a Deal!

Best Cards Fall in Hands of Secretaries; Women Scientists Dropped.

The New Deal in Washington's civil service life places better cards in the hands of secretaries than in the hands of women scientists.

The wave of economy which swept through the U. S. Bureau of Fisheries carried away the only two women scientists attached to that organization's staff.

During this early portion of the new deal, many women whose education and experience were neither as extensive nor as broad as that of women scientists have arisen to positions of prominence, if not influence, because they were capable of doing secretarial work for men suddenly thrust into high positions.

Miss Cable has accepted a two-months assignment in Washington. Dr. Koehring is on the pay roll of the Texas Oil Co. for a limited time while she assists in investigating the cause for the high mortality rate of oysters in Louisiana, where the waste matter from the company's wells is said to be killing the bivalves.

According to Elmer Higgins, in charge of scientific work for the Bureau of Fisheries, these women were efficient scientists. They were dismissed, he said, because it is impossible for a woman to do as many types of work with field parties as men are able to do.

The Playing Problem.

WHILE general principles governing the lines the Declarer should follow in the play of the hand are easy enough to lay down, the interesting hands at the Bridge table usually require individual treatment. The exact method of play, the question of drawing trumps or not drawing trumps, the question of suit eliminations and the like are ones that ordinarily have to be answered early if a plan, however good, is to be successfully carried out.

Recently a Duplicate game in New York City afforded the following unusual deal:

West, Dealer.
East-West vulnerable.

West	North	East	South
1♡	Dbl.	Pass	1♠
Dbl.	2♠(1)	Pass	4♠(2)
Dbl.	Pass	Pass	Pass

1—The raise to three of partner's Takeout is perhaps slightly optimistic. However, North and South are not vulnerable and North is anxious to prevent opponents from getting together, possibly advantageously, in a club contract.

2—South has done nothing but give one forced response and the hand really has considerable strength although containing only one plus honor-tricks. The bid of four spades is therefore justified.

Of seven players who held the South hand, only one, Miss Lee Goode, found a method of making four spades. It is true that this contract, even if the hand is perfectly played by Declarer, can no doubt be defeated by Double Dummy defense and the choice of the ideal Opening lead, and that even with the card actually chosen as the Opening lead, it is still impossible to fulfill the contract if East is fully awake to his defensive opportunities. In spite of this, Miss Goode deserves a great deal of credit for her successful strategy.

The Opening lead was the club King, and when the Dummy was spread upon the table this trick was ruffed. In order to avoid blocking entry into her own hand the Declarer ruffed with the Ten and then led a small spade, winning with the Queen. West's singleton Knave dropped and South now led the club Queen. West covered and the Ace of trumps was played from Dummy, wnning the trick. South now returned to her own hand with the lead of a low spade and led the club Knave, upon which a small heart from Dummy was discarded. Thus the process of eliminating clubs from both the open and closed hands was completed.

South's next play was to lead a small heart, which West ducked, and which was taken with the King in Dummy. A heart was returned and West won the trick with the Queen. For lack of something better he led the heart Ace. Here East missed his defensive opportunity. A ruff at this point, followed by the lead of a diamond, would have defeated the contract one trick, but East did not see the possibilities of this line of defense, and consequently the success of the contract was now assured. To lead another club would permit the Declarer to ruff in the Dummy and discard one diamond from the closed hand. East's trump would then be picked up and one diamond trick established. As a matter of actual play, West elected to lead the Ace of diamonds, hoping that East held the Queen. However, there was at this point no satisfactory defense for the West player.

West could have defeated the contract by a different lead; East, by the utilization of an entirely worthless trump, could have accomplished the same end.

Cool Chair Mats for Summer Use.

Lovely, colorful chair mats, sturdy and well-wearing as fabric mats, are made today from crepe paper. Yes, indeed. The crepe paper is cut into strips 1½ inches wide and crocheted in single crochet stitch. The wide strips make a compact, large stitch which goes very quickly. A most attractive mat was seen recently that had been in constant use for nearly two years and yet showed practically no sign of wear. Four harmonizing colors had been used—light and dark orange and yellow and brown—and the crocheting was simply a series of rounds in single crochet, with the colors in graded effect. These crocheted crepe paper mats are entirely practical. They make charming and inexpensive gifts and novel items for a bazaar.

Mild Criticism.

But I can't enjoy dancing

Misses'
Black Satin Jacket Costume
$16.75

This is an exceptionally smart satin costume. The quite fitted jacket with link metal buttons has a most tailored effect. Slip off the jacket and the frock with its short cap sleeves and white satin tie, is charming. No fall wardrobe will be complete without at least one black satin such as this. Sizes 14 to 20.

Ted, a little older than Brother, but one of his favorite playmates, wears a suit of navy blue flannel and English shorts. The belted coat features pleats, stitched only as far down as the belt line. His Eaton cap and collar, Oxford ties and high socks are the envy of small Brother.

Brother and Sister are going to a party, and are practicing their hostess bow. Brother is clad in white satin trousers, with batiste shirt-waist and ruffled collar. Sister feels very grand in an orchid silk frock, with old-fashioned cut and shirred trimming. Her bandeau of black velvet repeats the shiny black of her patent leather slipper.

Sister's little friend, Marie, is getting ready for Autumn early. Her saucy saucer hat of bright red felt is topped with an absurd black feather. The red matching coat is fastened by two black buttons. Another interesting feature is the coat's heavy black stitching. The belt fastens with a black buckle.

"Here, pupy, come get your milk. I have just had mine." Brother's new responsibility is very much on his mind, and it is time for breakfast. He wears a practical little suit of brown and white checkered gingham with brown tie and belt. His first sturdy shoes and new dog make him feel most important.

Radio Dial Flashes

By Robert D. Heinl.

CARLISLE BARGERON, who returned to The Post yesterday with his new column, "Along the Potomac," will be guest speaker in "Back of the News," over WRC, at 5:30 o'clock this afternoon. This is the spot usually occupied by William Hard, N. B. C. commentator. During the latter's absence attending the London Economic Conference, and later traveling in Europe, Hard's colleagues here have been substituting for him.

Mr. Bargeron said last night that he had no particular topic in mind for today's discussion, but that he welcomed the opportunity of addressing listeners upon returning to his former position as political analyst of The Post.

Conrad Thibault, young barytone of the Show Boat, was the victim of a tragedy in connection with his radio work. He and his young wife were married while they were both in their 'teens. Year after year they worked, struggled and saved together so that Conrad could continue his musical studies. Success came slowly.

Finally Conrad got his big chance. He went to New York for an audition and won his opportunity to go on a big program.

But that day he received a telegram. His wife was very ill following a sudden operation. She died without ever knowing that their years of striving were not in vain and that he was started on a brilliant career in radio.

THOSE participating on the Washington High Spots program, under the direction of Shara Kerbel, tonight at 8:15 o'clock over Station WRC are Mary Russell Williams, soprano, singing a special arrangement of the Shadow waltz; the Hanna Sisters, harmony duo; Edwin Rogers, barytone, and the Misses Leona Kash and Kay Renital, piano duo. John Mayo is the master of ceremonies.

At last the mystery has been solved as to why Hans Kindler did not conduct the Philadelphia Summer Orchestra concert Saturday night. Washington listeners were disappointed and swamped WJSV with telephone calls.

According to C. C. Cappel, manager of the National Symphony Orchestra, who has just returned from Philadelphia, the last Thursday's concert, featuring the Hall Johnson Choir, was rained out and had to be postponed until Friday. This placed the orchestra one day behind schedule necessitating the omission of Mr. Kindler's program for Saturday.

WJSV will carry Saturday and Sunday evenings concerts by the Philadelphia Orchestra under Kindler's direction, both beginning at 7:30 o'clock.

"WHAT Do You Want to Know?" the cause of rain, thunder and anything, a new question and answer exchange, will be started today by Kurt Heinfelden, a research worker with a flair for the unusual. (WRC, 4:15 p. m.)

The Possum Hunters, that red-hot fiddling aggregation from the Shenandoah Valley, will be back with the Corn Cob Pipe Club members over WRC at 9 p. m., August 9, and promise some real hillbilly tunes.

A program devoted to the distinguished American composer, Edward MacDowell, will be given by Howard Barlow conducting and his symphony orchestra. (WJSV, 10 p. m.)

"ALICE IN WONDERLAND," a scene of which is to be presented by Eve le Gallienne, will attract young and old alike. (WMAL, 6:15 p. m.)

Dr. Fred O. Tonney, of the Board of Health, of Chicago, will discuss "Laboratories and Research" in the National Farm and Home Hour. (WMAL, 12:30 p. m.)

A Negro male chorus of 80 voices from New Orleans University, is an unusual daytime offering over WMAL at 3:45 p. m.

The Happy Bakers will sing Percy Wenrich's newest tune, "Trimming Up the Old Gray Bonnet," which has not yet been published and is still in manuscript form. For comparison, they will give Wenrich's most famous song, "Put On Your Old Gray Bonnet," which swept the country more than a score of years ago. (WJSV, 7 p. m.)

That Washington is not such a bad summer resort will be brought out in the program of Radio Joe tonight for the nonvacationists, the stay-at-homes." (WMAL, 6:30 p. m.)

New Yorker Today

By Mark Barron.

New York—The crack detachment of metropolitan police is the midtown squad. They are handpicked, specially trained patrolmen. They must be tall, intelligent and well educated. They work directly out of headquarters and are not attached to any precinct.

The midtown squad patrols that expensive, luxurious neighborhood around Grand Central Terminal and Fifth avenue. Here are located high-priced gold and diamond merchants, exclusive furriers, famous financial institutions. It is indeed a tempting neighborhood for criminals.

When they were first organized a couple of years ago, they were humorously referred to as the "courtesy squad." One of their instructions was to make a special effort to make out-of-towners feel at home here.

Welcome, Stranger!

I witnessed an example of this only the other afternoon. A school teacher visiting here from Haiti was seeking the Metropolitan Museum, and asked directions of one of the midtown squad: Instead of just giving directions, the officer escorted her to Fifth avenue, a block away, placed her on a bus and instructed the conductor to see that she got off in front of the museum.

But these courtesies are only a very minor part of their service. Since their beginning, crime in the Fifth avenue sector has become almost negligible. No longer does there occur those once frequent attempts to hold up gold and diamond merchants in their little offices in the side street Fifties.

The reduction of crime in this section during the past two years seems to indicate that their chief service has been as preventers of lawlessness.

Nothing Stops 'Em.

Small-time acrobats and adagio dancers have solved a rental problem in their own way. Lacking the necessary finances to rent rehearsal halls, they have taken to the roofs of theatrical rooming houses to work out their new acts for the coming season.

Gazing out of a window of the twenty-first floor of a hotel on Eighth avenue the other afternoon, I counted a dozen acrobatic acts rehearsing on nearby roofs.

Ancient bicycles are being pulled out of dusty storehouses as cycle parades are becoming the current fad on fashionable Long Island beaches.

In one such parade the other day appeared a 9-foot high wheeler, an 1832 English walker with spool-type pedals, sociable tandem, triplet, old tandem, 1888 model with solid tires, quad, three seater with little seat for child, ladies' and gents' type new tandem, and a wooden high wheeler.

Walt Mason, Himself

Dr. Fell.

I DO not love you, Dr. Fell, the reason why I can not tell; but this much I do know full well, I do not love you, Dr. Fell." It is an old and simple rhyme that journeys down the halls of time, an evergreen that does not fade, while nobler verses have decayed. The author's name is now unknown, his grave perhaps is overgrown with tangled thistles, in the dell, where once he dodged old Dr. Fell. And still his little jingle thrives, because it touches human lives, expressing in a humble tone a weakness that we all have known, a weakness that we all deplore, while we proceed to shut the door against some later Dr. Fell who comes to bore us where we dwell. We're all acquainted with the gent whose daily presence we resent, who seems to chill our shapely feet when he appears upon the street, who jars us with his every word, although this feeling is absurd. We make an effort to be fair; we say, "This man is good and square, there's not a blemish on his fame, his morals surely are not lame, his learning's said to be immense, he is endowed with good horse sense, he goes to church and takes a hand in all good movements in the land, in spite of which it's sad to tell, we do not love this Dr. Fell." The rhyme has everlasting youth because its based on deathless truth.

Interest on Bonds Is Paid by Miami

New York, Aug. 8 (Spl.).—As the first move in carrying out the agreement recently concluded for refunding the debt of the City of Miami, Fla., the city has paid to the bondholders' committee certain funds which it had collected for interest payments on its bonds, according to announcement from headquarters of the bondholders' protective committee, 115 Broadway. The funds so paid will be credited pro rata to bonds deposited with the committee on or before November 10, 1933. In a public statement issued today the bondholders' committee calls for the deposit of all outstanding bonds of the City of Miami, Fla., regardless of the date of maturity or purpose of issue. The committee also announces that it now has on deposit approximately $17,750,000 out of a total outstanding amount of approximately $30,000,000 of bonds.

In response to payment of funds made by the city the bondholders' committee has withdrawn all suits which it had instituted against the city in behalf of the bondholders. These suits consisted of mandamus actions impounding interest funds and requiring the levy of a tax for debt service and also injunction suits restraining the city from accepting bonds and coupons in payment of delinquent taxes and special assessments.

Wholesale Houses Hum With Activity

Chicago, Aug. 8 (AP).—Wholesale houses hummed with activity today as buyers from virtually every State in the Union converged upon them with apparently but a single purpose—to buy.

The occasion was the annual meeting of the Interstate Merchants Council, and P. W. Kunning, trade promotion director of the Chicago Association of Commerce, said he expected approximately 20,000 buyers to arrive by tonight prepared to spend a grand total of close on to $25,000,000.

In addition to fall buying, Kunning said wholesalers were reporting sales in many instances for Christmas stocks. Both attendance and sales records were threatened by the enthusiastic response of the buyers, he said.

Trade Trends.

(Associated Press.)

Gasoline—Reports from leading Midwest producing centers say that markets have weakened under a substantial decline in demand. Material with octane rating of 59 and below is said to be purchasable at as low as 3½ cents a gallon.

Zinc—Despite favorable statistics for July metal is reported still available at 5 cents a pound, East St. Louis. It is understood that producers are willing to sell only moderate tonnages at this quotation.

Steel—"No changes in actual ultimate consumption of steel," says the American Metal Market, "except that the automobile industry has begun in a mild way to taper off in activity. No new sources of demand are seen for the nearby future, but the Federal building program and railroads loom as takers of large tonnages within a few months."

Copper—Interest in the market has slackened this week and producers say that domestic metal buying probably will remain quiet for some time in view of the efforts to develop a code for the industry under the National Recovery Administration.

Dried fruits—Jobbers report the day to day volume of business better than usual for this season of the year which is attributed partly to the comparatively low prices on dried fruits prevailing here compared with California prices.

Bond Market Remains at Monday Level

Carrier Liens Firmer as Sales Volume Rises to $10,070,000.

New York, Aug. 8 (AP).—The bond market felt a little better today, although prices, as a whole, were unable to get anywhere in particular.

The sales volume stepped up to $10,070,000, par value, and the average for 60 domestic corporate issues was unchanged at 80.9.

While both the industrial and utility groups lagged moderately, secondary carrier liens reflected both sympathy with rallying stocks and further optimistic freight car loading reports which indicated there might be few important seasonal traffic declines.

Rail bonds up 1 to around 3 points included some of Alleghany Corporation, Chesapeake Corporation, St. Paul, Denver & Rio Grande, Erie, Illinois Central, Southern and Frisco. Best grade transportation issues maintained a steady to firm position.

Among the more active utilities and industrials, up around a point or more, were maturities of American Smelting, International Hydro-Electric, International Telephone, Postal Telegraph and Warner Bros. Bonds of North American and Bethlehem Steel were a trifle heavy.

United States Government listed securities were fairly firm and a bit more active than recently.

Foreign obligations were irregular and quiet. Issues of Berlin City, Great Britain were up fractionally to about 3 points. The Argentines and Japanese were off a point or more.

Stocks Resume Climb On Heavier Turnover

Prices Advance 1 to 3 Points, Averaging 2.7, Under Gold, Motor and Alcohol Leadership; Sales Total 1,240,124 Shares.

New York, Aug. 8 (AP).—Throwing off some of its recent somnolence, the stock market roused itself today to get up and take a look at the sun.

The experience proved to be tonical, for prices advanced 1 to around 3 points. Volume rose, too, as compared with the desultory behavior of yesterday's colorless session, although there was no particularly cogent reason advanced by Wall street to account for the somewhat livelier tune tapped off by the ticker. Trading was largely professional.

At the sound of the closing gong, transfers stood at 1,240,124 shares. The Associated Press-Standard Statistics composite covering 90 selected stocks showed an advance of 2.7.

Purchasers looked with particular favor today on shares of gold, motor and alcohol companies, although prime names in the industrial list had their innings, too.

In the docket of news developments, the item which particularly interested Wall Street was the conference of the administration's monetary experts with President Roosevelt.

In some quarters this suggested that some announcement on inflation might be in the offing, or at least an intimation of the Government's future fiscal policies. Thus far, the financial community recalled, the President has made no attempt to use any of the unprecedented powers over money granted him under the inflation bill.

General Motors' report, showing July sales, was read with satisfaction by the street's business experts, who were also impressed with the insistent efforts of the Recovery Administration to pacify the turbulent spirits in the Pennsylvania coal district.

In stocks, gains of 1 to 3 or more points were registered by Westinghouse, Dome Mines, Alaska Juneau, Allied Chemical, du Pont, General Motors, Chrysler, Auburn, Kennecott, National Biscuit, J. I. Case, Standard Oil of New Jersey, New York Central, Baltimore & Ohio, Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, Chesapeake & Ohio, Western Union, United Aircraft, National Distillers, U. S. Industrial Alcohol and American Commercial Alcohol. Homestake Mining, generally the most brilliant name among the gold issues, spurted 15 points.

C., M., St. P. & P. Freight Loadings Gain in Week

New York, Aug. 8 (AP).—Freight loadings of the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific System last week totaled 24,213 cars, compared with 24,609 in the previous week, and 20,173 in the same period last year.

Underwriters Honor Capital Insurance Men

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Those receiving awards from the college which will entitle them to the designation of chartered life underwriters, are: Benjamin A. Harlan, executive secretary, Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co.; Harrison R. Hathaway, underwriter, Sun Life Assurance Co. of Canada; Harold D. Krafft, assistant agency manager, Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States; H. Bernhard Lemon, Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co.; Samuel E. Moores, field secretary, Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co.

Local men to receive the chartered life underwriter designation upon completion of three years' satisfactory life insurance experience are: Thomas L. O'Brien and Warren S. Stone, underwriter, New York Life Insurance Co. Others to receive certificates in life insurance agency management are: H. Lawrence Choate, chartered life underwriter, general agent, Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Co., of Newark, N. J., and George Link, assistant secretary, policyholders service department, Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co.

Eligible for Membership.

The men who have just received the chartered life underwriter designation will be eligible for membership in the local chapter of Chartered Life Underwriters. This chapter is now composed of Carl Smith Dow, president; Joseph A. Marr, vice president; James A. DeForce, secretary-treasurer; J. Hicks Baldwin, Edward S. Brashears, H. Lawrence Choate, Lawrence C. Crawford, H. Cochran Fisher, Karl S. Hoffman, J. Alan Maphis, Frank D. Roach, Troy M. Rodlum, Earle W. Sapp, Dwight T. Scott, Russell Shelk and Paul D. Sleeper.

Examinations of the American College of Life Underwriters were recently held in 58 colleges and universities. Six hundred and sixty-three candidates took the examinations for chartered life underwriter (C. L. U.) certification and 32 took those in life insurance agency management.

The examined candidates represented 131 cities and towns in 37 States, the District of Columbia, China and Cuba. Of those who took the chartered life underwriter examinations, 123 passed and, having fully completed their eligibility requirements, are being awarded the Chartered Life Underwriters designation.

The diplomas for 28 others who passed all of the examinations will be deferred until they have had at least three years of satisfactory life insurance experience. Certificates of proficiency are being awarded to six candidates and certificates in life insurance agency management to 23.

The American College of Life Underwriters, which awards the chartered life underwriter designation, was established by outstanding leaders in the life insurance vocation for the four-fold purpose of establishing an educational standard for the profession of life underwriting; encouraging and fostering training of students in educational institutions for the career of professional life underwriter; cooperating with educational institutions in general life insurance education and recognizing properly qualified life underwriters with a professional designation.

Aim of Standards.

In setting up educational standards for the chartered life underwriter examinations which would win universal respect in insurance, professional and academic circles, recognition was given to the fact that life underwriters need to know more than the principles and practices of life insurance itself.

Their calling deals intimately with economic and sociological problems, with the principles and psychology of salesmanship, with private and corporation finance, with banking and commercial credit, with thrift, investment, taxation, contractual relations of many kinds, wills, trust arrangements and the management of estates.

Familiarity with these subjects is highly desirable for life underwriters in order to qualify them for their negotiations with business men and others on a basis of mental equality.

Accordingly, the five examinations given by the American College of Life Underwriters, as one of the prerequisites for the C. L. U. designation, cover all of these fields. It is quite evident, therefore, that candidates successfully passing these comprehensive examinations have an education background of a high order.

The examinations in life insurance agency management, which were given for the first time this year, recognize that capable management requires certain education and training of a distinctive nature, which is not necessarily associated with large personal production or the rendering of professional service. The subjects covered are particularly related to sound agency development and administration.

The E. S. Brashears Agency, Washington branch of the Union Central Life Insurance Co., of Cincinnati, reports an increase of 111 per cent in net-paid-for business for July, over June. Applications for new business also showed an increase.

Foreign Markets.

(Associated Press.)

London—A cheerful atmosphere marked the resumption of trading on the stock exchange after the long week-end holiday. Gilt-edged securities held firm on further investment demand while transatlantic issues were easier in sympathy with the Wall street market. Home rails were firm, due to the anticipation of good traffic reports. The market closed steady.

Paris—Reflecting the inactivity in other markets, trading on the bourse was dull today. Price movements were narrow, but the tendency was firm. The closing was steady.

Auto Upswing Stirs Cheers In Wall Street

Major American Industry Exceeds Expectations in Gaining Ground.

New York, Aug. 8 (AP).—Wall street, accustomed as it has become after a long period of cloudy weather to finding bright spots on the economic horizon, has been cheered by reports of the rapid come-back being made by the automobile trade.

One of the country's major industries, the motor car business, has exceeded expectations of analysts in the celerity with which it has regained ground lost as the result of tight purses and jobless motorists.

Whereas, three months ago statisticians were predicting that the industry's business might fail to equal the volume in 1932 and red ink would mark the ledgers of most companies, improvement has been so marked that indications point to profits of most of the major concerns, in the third quarter of 1933 attaining the best level since the comparable period of 1929.

Record of 1929.

The year, 1929 was a fairly good year for the automobile industry, although not equaling 1928, when the motor car industry enjoyed the greatest prosperity in its history.

During the September quarters of 1929 these companies, producing the great bulk of the automobiles manufactured in this country, earned an aggregate net profit of $89,800,000.

While no one is so sanguine as to hope that this mark will be approached this year, analysts say that profits of the group should exceed 1930 and 1931, when the reduced earnings reflected the progressive and cumulative effects of a depression that caused motorists to decide to get along with their old cars a little longer.

Returns of Ten Companies.

Motor car manufacturers made money in 1930 and 1931. The aggregate net returns of the ten companies in the third quarters of 1930 approximated $20,750,000 and about $14,000,000 in the comparable period of the following year.

American motorists, after a long moratorium, apparently are replacing their old cars with new ones.

Production schedules now are considerably ahead of last year and the output in July alone was about 75 per cent of all the cars and trucks produced in the third quarter last year.

Exports to Scots Increase Heavily

(Associated Press.)

The canny Scotchman who relishes American food and fruit has found a way to indulge this appetite and his sweet tooth since the United States went off the gold standard, through the 30 per cent increase in the dollar value of the English pound.

In the Glasgow consular district, the average imports of raw citrus fruits in the May-June period amounted to 1,864,000 pounds compared with 22,500 pounds in the January-April period. Cured ham imports jumped from 752,000 pounds to 1,207,000 pounds in May-June, while canned fruits increased from 691,000 pounds to 937,000 pounds and refined sugar increased from 317,000 pounds to 402,000 pounds.

The figures were reported to the Commerce Department yesterday by M. E. Malige, consul at Glasgow. Other reports showed low-priced American automobiles in the April-May period had comprised 65 per cent of all motor vehicles sold in Sweden, totaling 780 machines.

Wool Market.

Boston, Aug. 8 (A.P.) (U. S. Dept. of Agr.).—A very moderate demand is being received on combing fleece wools of the medium grades. The outlet is broadest on 58s, ½ blood quality with sales closing on strictly combing lots of this grade in Ohio and similar lines at 35@36 cents in the grease. Lighter them average shrinking wools brought grease prices slightly above 36 cents, the scoured basis equivalent on strictly combing 56s being estimated at 65@66 cents. Other grades of fleeces are mostly quiet.

Steel Prices Unchanged.

Curb Follows Big Board on Upward Trek

New York, Aug. 8 (AP).—The curb market followed the pattern of the big board on a quiet upward trek today.

Moderate accumulation of leading issues which increased in the late dealings, to advance prices fractions to around 2 points, represented mostly professional transactions.

An early spurt in the alcohol division was reduced in the late dealings. Hiram Walker halved an advance of nearly 4 points. Canadian Industrial Alcohol "A" and Distillers Corporation-Seagrams showed gains of about a point.

Oils were generally firm, Gulf advancing 2½, while Standard Oil of Indiana, and Humble improved sizable fractions. Pan-American Airways rose 2¾ points, while various issues gaining a point or more included Newmont, Aluminum Co. of America, Dow Chemical, and Pittsburgh Plate Glass. Transfers approximated 224,000 shares, compared with 188,000 for Monday.

Oklahoma Fields Cut Oil Production

Tulsa, Okla., Aug. 8 (AP).—Oklahoma and Texas oil fields cut their production enough last week to bring the national daily average down 24,411 barrels, from 2,746,366 to 2,721,955 barrels, the Oil and Gas Journal reports.

Texas reported a reduction from 1,242,176 barrels to 1,234,607 barrels a day, principally caused by a reduction in east Texas from 634,940 to 624,495 barrels.

There was an increase from 125,620 to 130,145 barrels in Kansas and from 110,000 to 113,000 barrels in eastern fields.

87,298 Cars Sold By General Motors

New York, Aug. 8 (AP).—The General Motors Corporation today reported sales of 87,298 cars and trucks to American consumers in July compared with 101,827 in June, and 32,849 in July last year.

Sales to dealers in the United States in July amounted to 92,546 units against 99,956 in June and 31,096 in the 1932 month. Total sales to dealers, including Canadian and overseas shipments, were 106,918 compared with 113,701 in June and 36,872 in July last year.

For the first seven months of 1933, sales to domestic consumers totaled 487,062 against 378,423 in the like period last year. Sales to dealers in the United States during this period aggregated 320,308 against 372,847 in 1932.

July sales to domestic consumers and dealers, plus Canadian and overseas shipments, were all larger than for any July since 1929.

Wheat Values Recover After Early Skidding

Rise Indicates Oversold Condition; Oats and Corn Mixed.

Chicago, Aug. 8 (AP).—Fluctuating nervously, wheat prices here made a last-minute quick recovery today from skidding that accompanied New York Cotton Market weakness and Winnipeg wheat quotations unsettlement.

The sudden rally of wheat values at the last indicated to pit observers that the market was in an oversold condition. Earlier, wheat at times showed decided strength parallel with reports that President Roosevelt and various economic advisers were to discuss the commodity dollar, and that a major development in administration currency plans appeared probable.

Wheat closed irregular, ¼ off to ⅜ up compared with yesterday's finish; corn unchanged to ⅞ down; oats at ¼ decline to ⅜ advance, and provisions showing 7 to 20 cents setback.

Sentiment Among Traders.

Prevailing sentiment among wheat traders most of the time today was notably less pessimistic than yesterday, and the volume of dealings somewhat larger.

Contributing to improved feeling was a statement from one of the largest grain companies in Chicago emphasizing that vast economic changes were taking place, and that the Government was definitely committed to bringing about increased employment, higher wages and higher commodity prices, especially on agricultural products.

The statement added that with domestic production of all grains running more than 1,500,000,000 bushels below last year, the price structure was greatly strengthened from that angle alone.

Break in Cotton.

Temporarily, however, a sharp break in the cotton market did much to upset the wheat trade, and tumbled wheat prices down more than 2 cents a bushel from the day's top. Meanwhile, relative weakness of Winnipeg and Liverpool wheat markets where business was resumed after holidays, had an additional disturbing influence. On the other hand, the United States Government crop report expected on Thursday was expected to confirm severe reductions in all grain yields as forecast by leading private authorities.

Corn was dragged down by late reports of more liberal offerings to arrive from rural sources. Oats receipts showed signs of diminishing.

Business Failures Drop to Low Mark

Trade Groups in All Sections Report Fewer Failures; Retail Improves.

New York, Aug. 8 (Spl.).—Fewer business failures were reported last week than for any full week so far this year. The total in the United States, as recorded by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., for the week ended July 27 was 333, compared with 336 defaults for the preceding week and 609 for the same period of 1932.

In all trade groups the totals were smaller than for the week preceding, with the retail class making the best showing.

With the exception of manufacturing, failures in all trade groups were under those for the same week of 1932.

Failures Are Fewer.

When analyzed by geographical divisions, there were substantially fewer failures recorded for the New England, Middle Atlantic, South Atlantic, and Western sections than for the week immediately preceding.

There was no change in the South Central section. In the Central East and the Central West the number was higher.

When compared with the figures for the corresponding week in 1932, the totals were smaller in all geographical divisions, with the exception of the Central West and the Western. In the former the increase was 4, and in the latter, 3.

Stock Exchange Is Defended; Writer Asserts It Saps Nation

New York, Aug. 8 (Spl.).—Critics of the New York Stock Exchange, who see it only as a gambling casino, are answered in a vigorous article of defense by Richard Whitney, president of the exchange, which appears in the August 9 issue of "The Christian Century," leading undenominational religious journal. He asserts that contrary to popular opinion the stock exchange, by providing a market for both buyers and sellers of securities, has rendered great service to the Nation during the depression. "At times when no other form of property was in fact readily salable, security holders could always avail themselves of the security market to obtain cash," he writes. "The task of thus holding the stock exchange open and keeping it functioning has not always been an easy one yet curiously enough the stock exchange authorities have sometimes been bitterly assailed by shortsighted persons at the very time when the free and open securities market, which they were maintaining under great difficulties, stood almost alone in the path of a wholesale moratorium of credit."

Commenting on the current movements to "stabilize" the securities market, he asserts that "the only way to stabilize security prices is to stabilize industrial earning power. So long as earning power fluctuates, the prices of securities which depend upon it are bound to fluctuate. Artificial stabilization schemes for the stock market, granted that they were really workable, could only succeed in manipulating security prices in order to have them tell falsehoods concerning the security values which they should truthfully reflect. Any such perversion of security prices, however well meant, would entail the danger of creating a disparity between prices and values that could be corrected only by unusually violent and sudden price fluctuations."

Abolish stock speculation, the buying of stocks and bonds with the purpose of making a profit out of the change in the market price. That is the plea of John T. Flynn, prominent business writer, in the August 9 issue of the Christian Century, leading undenominational religious journal. He declares that stock speculation has undermined our business and industrial life and that "corporation managers and directors can make ten times as much in the stock market with their own stocks and the stocks of their colleagues from whom they obtain inside information as they can from their salaries as corporation executives. The result is that many corporations are run primarily as manufactories of stocks and instruments for stock market profit rather than public producing machines."

Betting on horse races is no different from betting on stocks, in the opinion of Mr. Flynn, and while the market operators by a well built up fiction that speculation of stocks is not gambling are able to evade the laws on gambling, nevertheless the economic and ethical consequences are not evaded. Mr. Flynn recommends the enactment of laws "which would do away with margin buying and short selling of stocks. Our corporation laws should be overhauled," he urges, "to prohibit the manipulation of corporate structures for speculative and promotional purposes. Our banks should be driven ruthlessly out of the speculative markets."

(Associated Press.)

The Government's cotton reduction campaign yesterday was estimated by the Federal crop reporting board to have taken 4,247,000 bales out of production, an increase of approximately 747,000 over estimates of the agricultural administration.

Although the estimate indicated less production than officials looked for, it was expected that payments to Southern cotton growers who reduced acreage would not be increased.

In return for their agreement to reduce acreage, farmers who signed contracts will be paid stipulated sums for each acre, or they will receive so much an acre and an option on Government-owned cotton at 6 cents a pound.

The crop reporting board estimated that 10,304,000 acres had or would be plowed under by Southern farmers. The indicated yield per acre of cotton on the basis of August 1 condition was fixed at 198.4 lint pounds.

Virginia, 10,000 acres, which was 12.8 per cent of the amount in cultivation on July 1; North Carolina, 239,000 acres, 18.1 per cent; South Carolina, 426,000 acres, 23.9 per cent; Georgia, 680,000, 23.7; Florida, 22,000, 18.0; Missouri, 110,000, 24.4; Tennessee, 260,000, 22.3; Alabama, 725,000, 22.3; Mississippi, 925,000, 23.5; Louisiana, 450,000, 24.9; Texas, 4,305,000, 27.3; Oklahoma, 1,160,000, 28.1; Arkansas, 925,000, 25.4; New Mexico, 30,000, 25.9; Arizona, 21,000, 15.3; California, 13,000, 5.9; other States, 3,000, 1.85.

The crop reporting board said that the campaign had resulted in the removal of more than one-fourth of the acreage in cultivation on July 1, the percentage being 25.3.

Dollar Is Steady On Foreign Marts

New York, Aug. 8 (AP).—The American dollar was a trifle irregular in foreign exchange dealings today, but closed in a fairly steady position.

The British pound sterling rallied a cent or more at one time, and finished with a net loss of ½ cent at $4.47½ for cables. French francs were unchanged at 5.31 cents, as were Swiss francs at 26.23 cents. Dutch guilders firmed 1-20 of a cent at 54.80 cents and Belgian belgas were up .01 of a cent at 18.92 cents.

Business Notes.

Philadelphia, Aug. 8 (AP).—Twenty-six thousand workers employed by the Full Fashioned Hosiery Manufacturers of America, Inc., were today voted a voluntary 25 per cent increase in piecework and hourly rates by the corporation's board. This follows similar action taken by 108 full fashioned hosiery mills in eastern Pennsylvania and southern New Jersey.

New York, Aug. 8 (AP).—Production of steel ingots in July totaled 3,203,810 tons, the highest for any month since June, 1920, the American Iron and Steel Institute reported today. This figure compares with 2,597,517 tons in June and 806,722 tons in July last year.

Waltham, Mass., Aug. 8 (AP).—A minimum wage increase of 20 per cent to more than 1,500 employes was announced today by the Waltham Watch Co. An additional increase will be made in cases where the 20 per cent does not bring the wage up to the $14 minimum provided in the industrial recovery program.

Chicago, Aug. 8 (AP).—Ten thousand people a day were brought to Chicago last week-end by the Chicago & Northwestern Railway, R. Thompson, traffic manager, announced today. It was the largest three-day nonholiday week-end in several years, Thompson said.

Cotton Rallies Trim Losses In Final Sales

December Closes at 9.92 as General Market Drops 30 to 35 Points.

New York, Aug. 8 (AP).—The feature in cotton today was the Government crop report pointing to a yield of 12,314,000 bales, or more than a million bales above the average of recent private reports.

The unexpectedly heavy figures brought out a good deal of liquidation, but the market in the opinion of local brokers showed remarkable stability, and after selling off to 9.68 for December, or 53 points net lower, recovered a good part of the loss.

That delivery closed at 9.92, or 24 points up from the lowest, with the general market closing very steady at net declines of 27 to 30 points.

Market Is Nervous.

The market was nervous and irregular before the report was issued. Prices were ruling within a point or two either way of yesterday's closing quotations when trading was suspended to receive the Government report.

The large crop figures came in for a good deal of bearish comment, but it seemed that scattering long accounts had been pretty well liquidated as the market's immediate response was a decline of only 30 to 35 points.

Additional selling orders came in with the decline extending to net losses of 48 to 53 points during the afternoon, but there was a good trade demand on a scale down and closing quotations showed rallies of 19 to 24 points from the lowest.

Census Bureau Figures.

The figures of the Census Bureau showing ginnings of 171,254 bales prior to August attracted very little attention. The crop indication of 12,314,000 bales compared with last year's crop of 13,002,000 and preliminary estimates placing last season's consumption at from 14,132,000 to 14,400,000 bales.

Exports today 15,505, making 143,844 so far this season. Port receipts, 10,500; United States port stocks, 2,974,999.

Both the trade and houses with Liverpool connections were reported active buyers here on a scale down during the afternoon decline, and the apparent absorptive powers of the market seemed to bring in some covering or rebuying by recent sellers in the later trading.

The Liverpool market, which reopened today after a suspension since last Friday, was relatively steady on trade calling, but business was quiet.

The Government report made the condition of the crop 74.2 and the indicated yield per acre 198.4, which, according to some trade estimates, would have pointed to a yield of 16,561,000 bales had it not been for the removal of acreage placed at 10,304,000 acres.

Cottonseed Oil.

Bleachable cottonseed oil was easier today under increased liquidation, with March contracts making a new season's low with final prices 14 to 15 points net lower. Sales were 82 contracts.

The Government cotton crop estimate of 12,314,000 bales was well above expectations, and this, together with the easier cotton, lard and crude oil prices, unsettled the market. Bleachable spot and September closed 5.20, December 5.40, January 5.44, March 5.53.

Workers Plan To Grow Food At Dam's Site

Managers of Norris Project Propose to Assist Men in Providing Needs.

Knoxville, Tenn., Aug. 8 (AP).—Workers employed to build the Cove Creek or Norris Dam by the Tennessee Valley Authority will spend half their time growing things to eat or at some other profitable trade.

This was made plain in the announcement of Dr. Arthur E. Morgan, chairman of the authority, that no work of any kind in connection with the dam would be let to contractors. Twice as many men as needed are to be employed, working three days a week at the dam and spending the rest of their time tending their gardens or learning a trade.

While it is not expected that actual construction of the dam will begin for another six months, there is much preliminary work to be done and Dr. Morgan says work will begin very soon.

Towns to Be Built.

Several towns are to be built to provide living quarters for the construction workers. These may present something new in town building, too, for with the Valley Authority selecting its own men for working half time, it is expected that each house will be provided with from one to five acres of tillable land, though not necessarily adjacent to the house.

The plan of the authority is for each family, as nearly as possible, to be self-sustaining with respect to food that can be grown at home. Truck crops and vegetables thrive in the area of the dam and agricultural authorities have asserted that food enough for the average family may be grown on one or two acres of improved land. This would not include wheat or corn crops for bread, however.

Operation of the entire project under direct supervision of the authority may eliminate the commissary and "company store" usually present where big projects are let to contractors.

Own Forces Recommended.

W. J. Savage, chief designing engineer for the United States Bureau of Reclamation, who has been selected to design Norris Dam, has been over the ground and, says Dr. Morgan, "strongly recommends the construction of the dam by our own forces."

"It is the custom of the Bureau of Reclamation," the chairman added, "to make full detailed working drawings of every item. Mr. Savage believes that the best and most economical results will come from the direct responsibility of the construction superintendent to the authority, without the intervention of a contractor."

The Norris Dam, nearly 200 miles above Muscle Shoals, will be the biggest single construction project in a program centering about the Government's $150,000,000 nitrate plant in Alabama—a program sponsored by President Roosevelt for rehabilitation, reclamation and reforestation work in the entire Tennessee River valley.

Dam to Prevent Floods.

The Norris Dam will provide some additional power if needed, but its prime function will be that of preventing floods and providing an even flow of water for navigation purposes.

The plan calls for making the river navigable, through a series of locks and dams, from Paducah, Ky., to Knoxville, a distance of approximately 650 miles.

The Tennessee valley covers an area of 40,000 square miles in more than a half dozen States. The Tennessee is one of the great rivers in the Nation, and its power possibilities and navigation potentialities have attracted the study of leading Americans for the past century.

U. S. to Report Each Week on Cotton Grades

(Associated Press.)

The Agriculture Department announced yesterday that weekly reports on the quality, including grade and staple, on this year's cotton crop would be released each week from the field offices of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics.

The weekly reports on the quality of cotton ginned in the principal producing arrears were issued last year from Washington. Growers and the cotton trade, however, asked that the information on the quality of cotton ginned be made available more promptly to be used in marketing the crop.

The report will include the number of bales ginned and what percentage is middling, detailed according to the various grades, and also the percentages under middling. Along with this will be reports on the length of the staple.

Atlanta, for the States of Georgia, Alabama, Florida, South Carolina, North Carolina and Virginia; Memphis, for Arkansas, Tennessee, Mississippi and Missouri; Dallas, for Oklahoma; Austin, for Texas and Louisiana; El Paso, for Arizona, California and New Mexico.

The first reports on early ginnings in Texas will be released at Austin on August 12. Reports for other States will begin as soon as sufficient samplese have been classed to be representative of a State or one of its major cotton-producing subdivisions.

Mr. Goldwyn's Elaborate Plans for a Stellar Debut—Young Writers

Anna Sten Has Suitable Film In Zola Story

Successful Authors Under Forty; Sylvia's Sin; Theater Gossip.

By Nelson B. Bell.

A blonde young actress from Soviet Russia, the first player to have been exclusively trained in State screen and stage institutions, made such a huge success last year in the Berlin-produced picturization of "The Brothers Karamazoff," that Samuel Goldwyn was attracted to her, signed her to a contract and took her to Hollywood for an American film career.

The young woman in question was Anna Sten, of whom you may have heard, but, whom, certainly, you have never seen.

Anna Sten has been in Hollywood for fifteen months without ever having made a picture. Within a week or two, however, the cameras and microphones will begin the task of recording her first Hollywood picture, a film version of the great Emile Zola's novel, "Nana," with George Fitzmaurice directing.

An explanation of those fifteen apparently idle months Mr. Goldwyn feels to be in order. But he offers no apology. Rather than reflecting lack of planning on his part, he says that the year and a quarter represents the most careful kind of preparation. And rather than idleness for Anna, this long period has meant the most difficult kind of work.

The discovery of "Nana" as a suitable vehicle for Miss Sten was in itself a task of major proportions. Anna is strictly a European—an earthy, feline type. She is not a langorous and sinister "other woman," nor is she a romantic ingenue. A role that would precisely dovetail with her talents necessarily would be a rare one; one to illuminate her unusual personality would be rarer still.

The story markets of the world had to be canvassed, carefully, slowly, patiently. Story after story arrived at the Goldwyn offices and one by one were discarded as the search went on month after month. Various story ideas were developed and treatments prepared on 20 plays and novels.

Edwin Justus Mayer and Leo Birinski finally brought to a very bright modern life the celebrated Zola story of "Nana." Goldwyn hailed this as the end of his protracted quest.

Had to Learn English.

While the story hunt was on Anna was continuously and variously occupied. She arrived in America without a word of English in her vocabulary. Expert instructors spent two hours each morning and two hours each afternoon teaching her English—not the American street speech, but the carefully modulated, fluid speech of the international theater. She wasn't taught to mouth words, to recite from memory, to read meaningless lines. Each word had to have a meaning and its proper inflection. Once she had mastered the new tongue, it quickly became sonorous and golden in the quiet way in which Anna speaks.

Then there was the business of assimilating American life, manners, colloquialisms. Goldwyn arranged for her to see American pictures three times a week. Instead of having a Russian cook for her household, she secured an American one. She isn't the smooth and polished sophisticate that Hollywood knows as a picture actress. She was taught to do what the film dollies do naturally, without thinking, in clothes and carriage. She had to adapt Hollywood elegance and glamor to her own nature and personality.

Goldwyn felt that, in preparing her for the screen, he wanted to know everything about her before she began her first picture. He couldn't afford to wait until her third or fourth picture to learn the secret of how best to photograph her or how to record her voice.

Scores of Tests.

Fifty-one tests of Anna Sten have been made. Some were for acting, for dramatic effect. She made a scene from Sidney Howard's "They Knew What They Wanted," and she did another from "Mati Hari." She liked cameo bits from Oscar Wilde plays, because his peculiar method of italicizing and underscoring words fitted in with her method.

She was photographed for her hair, for her eyes, for street clothes, for costumes in "Nana." Various make-ups were tried under different lightings. A number of cameramen were tested on her to see who would get her best.

In "Nana," she revives the can-can, that famous Paris street dance of the 1870's. Although trained as a dancer in childhood, weeks of hard work were necessary to improvise and execute a modernized version of its high-kicking steps good enough to give it a chance at present-day popularity and favor. Endless research went on for music and for costumes.

She sings, too, in her first picture. Richard Rodgers and Lorenz Hart, two of Broadway's most gifted songsmiths, have written a plaintive ballad in the manner of the period for her. She had to be tested carefully for her singing voice and even for humming, with an orchestra, and with a piano.

It takes time and money. Goldwyn is sure that Anna Sten in "Nana" will be worth the trouble.

We have been prating more or less these past few days of players who are doubling on the local screens. While that may not strictly be said of Doris Kenyon, the fact remains that while this charming actress is appearing as Madame de Pompadour with George Arliss in "Voltaire," at the Earle this week, she also is to be seen as one of Richard Dix's leading women in "No Marriage Ties," opening at RKO-Keith's on Friday. Miss Kenyon, by the way, never has been more lovely than she appears through the camera's lens this season.

If you want to win fame as a writer for the screen, you must do so before 40, a survey of the field of noted novelists, playwrights and screen writers of Hollywood has disclosed.

Noel Coward, just turned 33, probably is the champion young writer of the entertainment world. The author of "Cavalcade," "Private Lives," "Bitter Sweet," "The Vortex," and many other plays, Coward recently has sold his production, "Design for Living," to Paramount. This daring treatment of the human triangle will be filmed under the direction of Ernst Lubitsch as one of the year's major pictures. Coward, it is said, has earned approximately $1,000,000 by his writings in the past five years.

John Monk Saunders, author of "The Eagle and the Hawk," wrote the war aviation epic, "Wings," before he was 30. Saunders also is the author of "The Legion of the Condemned," "Dawn Patrol" and "The Last Flight."

Vina Delmar is another youthful prodigy whose works have reached the screen. She wrote "Bad Girl" at the age of 25, and her recent story, "Pick Up," was produced when she was only 30.

Laurence Stallings, author of "The Big Parade" and coauthor of "What Price Glory," was under 35 when he wrote those martial masterpieces.

Mae West, the screen's current sex appeal champion, who writes her own plays and screen stories, was under 30 when she wrote "She Done Him Wrong." She was even younger when she produced "Diamond Lil," "Sex" and "The Constant Sinner."

Gene Fowler, author of "Shoe the Wild Mare," which will be filmed during the coming season, was under 40 when he wrote it, as well as his first novels, "Trumpet in the Dust" and "The Great Mouthpiece," and the screen play, "What Price Hollywood."

Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur, authors of "The Front Page," were under 40 when they penned that rowdy journalistic drama, and the former was much younger when he started the parade of gangster pictures with "Underworld."

Donald Henderson Clarke, author of "Louis Baretti," "Millie," "The Impatient Virgin" and others, is another former newspaperman who turned novelist successfully before 40. Now he, too, is in Hollywood writing for pictures.

Fannie Hurst, author of "Back Street;" Edna Ferber, who concocted "Cimmaron," and Phil Strong, who wrote "State Fair," also were under the age deadline when they turned out those best sellers later transformed to the screen.

Reverting momentarily to "No Marriage Ties," coming to RKO-Keith's on Friday with Richard Dix starred, it would seem that writing four screen hits for a star and directing that same star in four successes would be a fair-sized job for any man, yet that is the feat accomplished by J. Walter Ruben, the director who megaphoned "No Marriage Ties." Previous to this latest task, Ruben had directed Dix in "The Public Defender," "Secret Service" and "The Great Jasper." He has written for the star "The Love Doctor," "Seven Keys to Baldpate," "Lovin' the Ladies" and "Young Donovan's Kid" as screen plays. Quite a chore.

French Leave.

Violating the cherished tradition of the acting profession that a part once begun cannot be abandoned, says Mr. Al Wilkie, of the Paramount publicity department, Sylvia Sidney has become the first actress to walk out of a picture before its completion.

Despite the fact that she received full salary during her recent illness and that the studio merely asked her to remain in Hollywood until she had recovered so that she could finish her work in Maurice Chevalier's new picture for Paramount, "The Way to Love," now two-thirds completed, Miss Sidney prefers to convalesce in Europe.

The picture will have to be remade at an additional cost of more than $100,000.

Mr. Wilkie seems to have forgotten the time Edna Best precipitately decamped from Hollywood in the midst of a picture to join her husband, Herbert Marshall, in New York, leaving the producers high and dry with even less excuse than Miss Sidney can plead.

Indian Tribesmen Shoot At British Army Plane

Simla, India, Aug. 8 (A.P.).—Efforts of British aviators to bring tribesmen on the northwest frontier to book took a new turn today as a result of an attack by 60 upper Mohmands on a Royal Air Force plane.

The airplane was hit three times, the bullets passing through the wing fabric. The pilots, who were engaging in a reconnaissance tour in the neighborhood of Lakai, on the British side of Khapak Pass, dropped a 20-pound bomb on the tribesmen. Firing ceased subsequently.

Blue Plains Is Sorry To Lose Stephenson

Sadness, tempered with joy that he has been identified, prevailed among the 674 residents of the District Home for the Aged yesterday as the news spread that William Michael Stephenson may be leaving soon.

During the almost three months he has been among them, the amnesia victim made himself one of the most popular members of the Blue Plains colony. With his wife, sister and eldest son notified of hif whereabouts, it is likely that he will be called for soon.

Nats Trounce Yankees, 5 to 1, Behind 5-Hit Pitching of Whitehill

This Morning

With Shirley L. Povich.

Yankee Stadium, Aug. 8.

THEY labeled Monte Weaver "The man who came back" when he dismissed his sore arm the other day and pitched the Nats to a 3-2 victory over Boston, but just how far he has come back will be ascertained with very little further ado tomorrow at Yankee Stadium.

Morose Monte, who is given to worrying over every ailment, be it hang-nail or toe-nail, will be entrusted with the task of pitching the Nats to an even break in what they are calling the crucial series with the Yanks. He never did have much trouble beating the Yanks, but neither did Tommy Loughran have much trouble in beating Johnny Risko until the fourth time they met.

Marse Joe McCarthy, of the Yanks, has Lefty Gomez dusted off and ready to fling at the Nats in the final game, and if Gomez's success against Washington in the past is any measure of his success tomorrow, the Nats will leave town with the even break they wrote Santa for after losing Monday's double-header.

Whitehill Is Praised.

This is beginning to look like piece about pitchers, so just to continue the motif, there is a great deal to be said about Earl Whitehill for the way he yanked the Yanks off their high horse this afternoon with that 5-hit performance that showed the Nats the way to victroy.

Whitehill was in fine form and fettle this afternoon. He had control, among other things, and was sticking that ball in there when he had to and when it was in there, it had reams of stuff written on it. The Nats' defense received only one difficult chance all afternoon, and Goslin turned that into a brilliant one-handed catch in the sixth inning.

Whitehill was working easily out there today. Every hit he yielded wasn't a personal insult as it some times is when the temperamental left-hander has arisen on the wrong side of his couch. On days like that, Whitehill usually starts pumping them in to the plate with disastrous results, but today he was as limber as a sapling, pitching with effortless ease. I seem to recall that he won 13 straight games with the second division Tigers three seasons ago.

McGowan Our Friend.

The Nats got those two runs in the fifth inning today on a reprieve by Hizzoner Bill McGowan when everybody in the park except the umpire thought Buddy Myer had made the third out after Dickey had caught his pop foul back of the screen. But McGowan said the ball hit the screen first, rendering the catch null and void and Myer could go up there and take another swing if he liked. Myer was already on his way to the dugout and the Yankee fielders were coming in from their positions when McGowan made the ruling. Dickey squawked like a stuck pig but, willy nilly, McGowan said Myer could have another rap.

Allen's next pitch was interrupted half way across the plate by Myer's bat and the ball sped on a low trajectory into the right field bleachers for one of the hardest socks Myer ever got in his life. It was slightly second-hand, but the New York papers can put it in the box score under an asterisk if they like.

Runs, Hits and Errors.

Myer's second-hand homer reminds this department of another somewhat similar occurrence in the world series of 1924 between the Nats and the Giants in that exciting seventh and last game at Griffith Stadium. . . . Muddy Ruel hadn't got a hit since the start of the series. . . . It was the twelfth inning . . . Ruel popped up again, as he had popped up in several previous games . . . Catcher Hank Gowdy waited for the ball to come down . . . And tripped over his mask as he was about to make the catch . . . The ball fell safely and on the next pitch Ruel got his first hit of the series . . . a double that put him in position to score when Earl McNeely got that famous "pebble" bounce over Lindstrom's head and won the world series.

Six Eliminates Ouimet in Trials

Newton, Mass., Aug. 8 (AP).—Francis Ouimet, Boston veteran, who has held three National golf championships, today was eliminated in the New England sectional qualifying play for the 1933 National Amateur Tournament. Ouimet was forced to play off with three others for the tenth and last place and was beaten by his Woodland Clubmate, Jesse Guilford, another National amateur titlist, at the third extra hole.

Guilford and Ouimet started the play-off with Charles Clare, of Race Brook, Conn., and Peter Petroski, of Highland, Conn. The quartet ended the regular qualifying play with a 36-hole total of 156.

The Connecticut golfers dropped out at the first extra hole, Guilford and Ouimet halved the second and Guilford became the tenth qualifier when he snagged a par 4 on the third extra hole, where Ouimet put his second into a trap, took 2 coming out and finally holed out with a 6.

Both Ouimet and Guilford were semifinalists in last year's National play at Baltimore.

Knight Slams Banovic for Decision

New Yorker Is Floored Twice as 2,000 See Laurel Program.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

JOE BANOVIC'S attempted comeback foundered at Twin City Arena last night, where the New Yorker ran afoul of Joe Knight's deadly left hand and lost the decision in a 10-round bout by a wide margin. A crowd that bordered on 2,000 saw the ranking No. 2 light-heavyweight win six rounds, with four even.

Floored in the fifth round for a count of nine, and again in the sixth for eight, Banovic came up fighting, but he was not equal to the task that confronted him. Putting Bingo Joe on the canvas was like trying to sink a cork. Banovic had the heart, a great fighting heart, but Knight boasted a punishing left, and the left won.

Knight Jolts His Foe.

Knight fought a cool, deliberate fight, waiting for his opponent to come in and belting him with lefts to the body when he did. Knight's widely advertised newly discovered right was much in evidence. He jabbed Banovic with it, preparing the way for a jolting left hook which invariably followed.

Banovic's punches were a trifle low in the early rounds. He was wary and moved slowly and cautiously, but was an easy target for the Southerner. Banovic rallied in the closing rounds, and the last three were his best. In the tenth he opened up a cut over Knight's eye.

Carey Wright came back fighting after being on the floor twice, for counts of nine and no count, to win the nod over Keller Crawford, a tough little battler from the Eastern Shore. Wright had the best of the infighting, but was on the verge of being knocked out when Crawford uncorked his powerful right.

Bailey Gains Decision.

Towering over his opponent with a tremendous advantage in height and reach, Smith showed the fans one of the smoothest left jabs they have seen in a long time. Bailey's infighting, plus some determined glove throwing at long range, turned the score in his favor.

Johnny Larkin punched baby-faced Mickey Ryon around to win an easy decision in a four-rounder, and Sailor Leonard used Kelley O'Neil as a stepping-stone to his first triumph within the squared circle in the opening four.

5 From D. C. Qualify for Title Golf

By Dave Herman.

IN a day of hectic golf that witnessed the collapse of three of the favored stars and saw Old Man Par prove invulnerable, Chandler Harper, of Portsmouth, Va., and Ernie Caldwell, of Baltimore, thundered home with 36-hole scores of 147 each yesterday at Columbia Country Club to tie for medal honors in the sectional trials for the National Amateur championship.

Fighting neck-and-neck down the stretch, Harper, 1932 medalist, and the lanky Caldwell outpaced their nearest pursuer, Roger Peacock, Indian Spring star, by 3 shots to land 2 of the 12 qualifying places allotted the Middle Atlantic section.

Harper knitted together rounds of 76—71, while Caldwell, shooting consistently, wound up with 74—73. The play-off is slated this morning at 10 o'clock.

Third Place to Peacock.

Finishing in third place, Peacock scored 76—74, to set the pace for the five District golfers who won berths. The other four Washington men who earned the right to compete in the national amateur proper, at Cincinnati, beginning September 11, are Miller B. Stevinson, the Columbia warhorse, who galloped around in 75—76—151; Martin F. McCarthy, of Beaver Dam, who staged a stirring comeback, rifling birdies on the twelfth, thirteenth and fourteenth, for a 74 after taking an 80 in the morning; Luther Steward, jr., of Congressional, and Dick Lunn, the big gun from Chevy Chase, who rallied for a grand 74. The last two named had 155's.

The remaining three places were filled by three gents from North Carolina, yes suh. N. E. Edgerton, a cotton warehouse owner from Raleigh, whose 71 set the morning pace, folded up in the afternoon, taking an 81 for a 152 total. He made the grade along with a fellow townsman, Fred Newnham, and Nelson MaCrae, of Wilmington, the latter two having totals of 155.

So, when the day's firing was over, the Nation's Capital qualified five men; North Carolina, three, and Baltimore and Virginia, two each.

There was considerable surprise when Billy Howell, of Richmond, Va., 1931 semifinalist and former Walker Cup star, failed to qualify. He played ragged golf for a 158. The downfall of Harry Pitt, the

Brooklyn, Aug. 8 (AP).—In a pitchers' battle between Ray Benge and Hal Schumacher, an eleventh-inning error by John Vergez today gave the Brooklyn Dodgers a 1-to-0 decision over the league-leading New York Giants. The defeat reduced the Giants margin over the idle Pirates to three games.

Dutra and Hines Tied for Medal With 138; Burke Fails in Trial.

By Paul Mickelson.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Aug. 8 (AP).—Leading a par-shelling brigade that shattered all field qualifying records to bits, Mortie Dutra, older brother of the defending title holder, and Jimmy Hines, from the Timber Points Club, New York, came in with sensational finishes today to tie for the National Professional golf championship medal with 36-hole totals of 138 shots.

So furious was the assault over the short but tricky Blue Mound Country Club course that eight players, among them Gene Sarazen, shot sub-par scores, ranging from Dutra's 66, to a half-dozen 68s, and when the shelling ended, a new record low of 146 was required to place among the 31, who will open the struggle for the championship tomorrow against Olin Dutra over the 36-hole match-play route. No play-off for extra positions in the qualifying bracket was necessary.

Burke Among Failures.

Ace Hudkins Improves But Is Still in Danger

Los Angeles, Aug. 8 (AP).—Ace Hudkins, wounded twice in a cafe disagreement early Sunday, was improving steadily, but still was in a critical condition, Dr. P. S. O'Reilly, his physician, said tonight.

The pugilist has received one blood transfusion since an operation was performed to remove bullets from his right lung and the pelvis. A second transfusion was planned for tomorrow.

"Hudkins is a little bit stronger," said Dr. O'Reilly, "but he still is in a critical condition and must fight a good battle to recover."

Cubs Climb Dean, Defeat Cards, 4-2

St. Louis Ace Handicapped by Wrist Injury, But Strikes Out Five.

Chicago, Aug. 8 (AP).—Chicago's Cubs, who last week assisted Dizzy Dean to a new major league record by striking out 17 times, today avenged themselves to the extent of defeating the St. Louis Cardinal ace, 4 to 2, in the opening game of their series.

Handicapped by a wrist injury suffered at Pittsburgh last week, Dean was still able to fan five batsmen, but the Cubs, headed by Kiki Cuyler and Gabby Hartnett, punched the tall righthander for eight hits, one more than the Cardinals were able to collect off Charlie Root.

Vines to Welcome Probe Of Amateur Tennis Status

By Alan Gould
(Associated Press Sports Editor).

NEW YORK, Aug. 8 (AP).—H. Ellsworth Vines, jr., 21-year-old national champion and current storm-center of American tennis, today welcomed an official investigation of his amateur status, growing out of widely circulated reports that the lanky Californian will turn "pro" after the 1933 season.

"I think it is a good idea. It will save me denying rumors every day," Vines told the Associated Press, after being informed that Louis J. Carruthers, chairman of the amateur rule committee of the United States Lawn Tennis Association, had started an investigation, to determine "all the facts" in connection with reputed inducements to Vines to forsake Simon-Pure ranks.

Received One Offer.

Vines explained that the only definite commercial offer he had received involved a proposition to manage a chain of sporting goods stores, with headquarters in New York City. He has no intention of following it up, he added, and insisted he had not talked with any one since returning from Europe about the possibilities of "cashing in" by joining Big Bill Tilden or any other professional enterprise.

While Carruthers did not go into details as to the extent of his fact-finding inquiry or even suggest what action, if any, his committee might consider, it was indicated the U. S. L. T. A. mainly was anxious to clear Vines' status before he tries for his third straight national singles championship in September.

The latest published reports have been specific in suggesting that Vines' prospects of turning "pro" for a considerable money inducement depended upon his showing at Forest Hills against an all-star field, including Fred Perry, Henri Cochet and Jack Crawford, his chief foreign rivals.

"We have the situation with respect to Vines under very serious consideration," Carruthers told the Associated Press. "I have read all the newspaper comment about professional proposals and so-called offers. I also have obtained other information and the amateur rule committee will make a thorough investigation."

Cochrane and Cramer Also Hit Homers as Grove Defeats Red Sox.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 8 (AP).—Lefty Grove found the Boston Red Sox troublesome today, but managed to hold them in check while his teammates were connecting for extra base blows to give the Athletics a 7-to-6 triumph.

Jimmie Foxx's thirty-second homer and four-base blows by Mickey Cochrane and Doc Cramer accounted for five runs. Cochrane's double in the first and Bob Johnson's two-bagger in the third sent in the remaining scores

For the Red Sox, R. Johnson scored when Rick Ferrell singled in the fourth and Ed Coleman fumbled. Then Ferrell tallied on Marty McManus' safety. In the fifth, Buck Walters and Ferrell hit to send teammates in. Ferrell doubled to send another run home in the seventh, and Tom Oliver singled to score McManus in the eighth.

By Shirley L. Povich
(Sports Editor of The Post)

YANKEE STADIUM, New York, Aug. 8.—The Nats staged a recovery act of their own this afternoon, gave employment to two Yankee pitchers and an extra hitter, restored the scoring power of the home run, and inflated their league lead to two games.

Twenty thousand New York fans, who had seen the Yanks behead the Nats in both ends of a double-header the day before, came back for more this afternoon and stayed to wonder if those first two games of the series weren't all a mistake. The old men of Manhattan were exceedingly feeble against the southpaw pitching of Earl Whitehill and that, among other things, won the ball game for Washington by the ample score of 5 to 1.

Chief among the other things were a home run by Buddy Myer and a home run by Heinie Manush who usurped the Yankees' thunder with a couple of colossal clouts into those right field bleachers that Ruth and Gehrig know so well, but weren't on speaking terms with this afternoon.

With beauteous Mrs. Whitehill in a nearby box cheering hubby on, the temperamental Washington left-hander unfolded a beautiful pitching performance to deflate the haughty Yanks with five hits and make this series look a bit better for the dopesters.

Shut-out Eludes Whitehill.

A shut-out performance eluded Whitehill in the fourth inning when the Yanks scored their lone run on a double play, which is an unprofitable method of scoring, to say the least. Only one other batter reached second base against the left-handed slants of Whitehill.

The Nats won the ball game by the simple expedient of putting two and two together. They scored two in the fourth and two in the fifth and were breezing along with a 4-1 lead when along came Manush in the eighth with a home run to add an entirely superfluous score.

Equally temperamental Johnny Allen had a shade the better of a pitching duel with Whitehill for three innings, when a single by Ruth in the first was the only semblance of a hit off either pitcher, and then the top of the Nats' batting order began blasting the shoots of the Yankee sophomore pitcher.

Goose Goslin rammed a single to center field and then Heinie Manush rammed a single to center field. Joe Cronin rammed a single to center field, just to be different, and Goslin scored.

Crosetti's Throw Helps.

Here, Frank Crosetti entered the scene and the Nats scored another run. Schulte rapped a mild grounder to Crosetti and the shortstop stepped on second to force Cronin. With an easy double-play in sight, Crosetti lost sight of first base and heaved the ball a half mile above Gehrig's head, while Goslin scored from third with the run that shouldn't have counted.

Royal Blunder Beaten in Stretch Duel as Monel Gets Show.

I Prevail Wins Feature on Coney Island Card From Inspection.

CHICAGO, Aug. 8 (AP).—The long-shot players had a chance to do some cheering today at Hawthorne when John J. Coughlin's Camp Douglas, a rank outsider, won the Park Ridge purse after a thrilling battle with the Audley Farm's Royal Blunder, and paid the rousing price of $126.62 for $2.

Monel, the odds on favorite, and Hope To Do raced into the stretch of the 6½ furlongs like a team, but weakened, and Camp Douglas and Royal Blunder started their battle to the wire. Wayne Wright, aboard Camp Douglas, using whip and boot, managed to outfinish Earle Pool and Royal Blunder to win by a head. Monel saved the short end of the purse.

The winner, paying the longest price of the meeting, raced the distance in 1:19 1-5.

Prevail Wins at Coney.

Coney Island, Ohio, Aug. 8 (AP).—The program here this afternoon was devoid of any outstanding attraction, but this did not dampen the enthusiasm of the big mid-week crowd which gathered to enjoy the sport.

In the absence of a headliner, the Terrace Park Purse, a 6-furlong dash for 2-year-olds, fourth on the card, served as the chief attraction. Twelve juveniles contested the issue and the winner turned up in A. Dietrich's I Prevail, a son of Busy American and Rose Mist. He was one of the choices and paid $6. Inspection held on determinedly to outstay the fast-closing Betty Wee, a filly from the stables of R. H. Anderson.

Wise Daughter Scores.

Saratoga Race Track, N. Y., Aug. 8 (AP).—The Saratoga Sales Stakes, 5½-furlong dash for 2-year-olds sold at auction here a year ago, attracted eight youngsters to the post here this afternoon and served to show the part fickle fate plays in these annual vendues. F. A. Burton's filly, Wise Daughter, which cost $800 as a yearling and was one of the sensations of the Miami season last winter, proved an easy winner, taking the $1,825 purse by three lengths. The cheaply acquired daughter of Wise Counsellor—Wise Mother has now earned $13,040.

Mrs. Payne Whitney's Black Buddy, sold for $4,000, was second, a length before Mrs. Dodge Sloan's Cavalcade, one that brought $1,200 last August. Mrs. T. J. Lewis' Main Chance, the most costly juvenile in the field at $10,000, wound up a badly beaten last.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

ALEXANDRE DUMAS began his writing career as a dramatist, writing several pieces for the stage which were, for one reason or another, never produced. Later in Paris he attained success writing drama and in 1839, started his career as a novelist. During his long career he is credited with writing 1,200 books, or 30 every year of his 40 active years.

He had the aid of others in much of his writings, and is charged by some critics with buying material outright to be published under his name without revision. These facts, or to what extent his collaborators did his work, are unknown. One thing is certain: none of Dumas' collaborators or alleged "ghost writers" ever turned out anything under his own name that rivals the works of Dumas himself.

Strange as it seems, the United States has more than 9,000 possessions—some of them so unimportant as to bear no name, but nevertheless possessions — outside the boundaries of the United States proper. Most of them are islands, or islets, 7,000 of which are in the Philippine Archipelago.

Dear Al: Hawthorne, Aug. 8.

Well, friend, here I am. Right back at the old stand and rarin' to get going. Understand my old pal, Mike, has been picking two a day—enough to keep the boss away. While the great Bennings was over in Canada hunting. And what hunting! One night we were out in the deep brush trying to bag a deer when two fierce eyes sparkled through the semidarkness. I was just about to let him have a gun full when the animal turned his head. And guess who it was? Just our old friend Louie Dear, the horse, out in the woods trying to work off some of that Arlington dope.

First race—Her Gold is a fair sort of a maiden. Asked to break from the outside of this field but has the early speed to overcome that handicap. Comes to this race recommended by the clockers. Cooley and Gay Follies are the chief contenders.

Second race—I've been over this race carefully and the most solid piece of horse flesh appears to be LeBruyere. We may pull up with a price too. Night Jasmine and Northgalis will have heaps of backing.

Third race—Flaghorn is the logical pick in this dash. This is a speedy youngster. The one to beat, I believe, is Para Four. This fellow turned in a fine effort recently and is up to a real race according to the clockers. Mumsie to show.

Fourth race—Martie Flynn gets the Bennings call here. Loves this track and may find Broad Meadows in need of a race after the trip over from Kentucky. Teralice has a chance and may furnish the surprise package.

Fifth race—Big Red was so impressive in the last effort that it takes little courage to go to him in this. However, no mistakes can be made with Gay World and Dusky Devil ready to make a stretch battle of it.

Sixth race—Unencumbered for the big end of the dough. Yes sir, our old friend is well oiled and greased. And what a mutuel! The consistent Cog-Air and the dependable Depression for the rest.

Seventh race—Anything can happen here and probably will. Looks like we'll have to go to the chalk. Through Ormond, Knowledge and Upon for the Bennings call at the finish.

Eighth race—Barry has been waiting around for a race of this sort. It's tomorrow or never in my book. Royal Purchase and Go Fetch for the other paying places.

Steele Mat Bout Is Goal of Russell

While Gino Garibaldi and George (Hot Cha) Zaharias are scheduled to furnish the fireworks in tomorrow night's rassling show at Griffith Stadium, fans seem to be more steamed up over the semifinal, which brings together the former champ and leg-scissors king, Joe Stecher, with Jack Russell.

Russell, a former Texas cowboy who weighs 235 and is 4 inches over the 6-foot mark in height, proved to be quite a showman in New York, and has recently become a convert of the realm ruled by Jimmy Londos. Hearing of Ray Steele's challenge to the world, Russell put in a bid for a match, but was told that he would have to hurdle Joe Stecher first; hence tomorrow's meeting between him and the veteran.

Latona, Welsh Win; Shore, Mrs. Stone Lose at Public Park Nets

2 D. C. Stars In Fourth Round

Latona and Welsh Both Come From Behind to Win Matches.

Shore and Latona Easy Winners in Doubles First Round.

CENTRAL PARK, New York, Aug. 8 (Spl.).—Flashing the most brilliant brand of tennis witnessed in the tournament thus far, Anthony Latona, of Washington, conquered Daniel Freedman, of New York, to advance into the fourth round of the National Public Parks Tennis Championships here today. After a gruelling three-and-one-half-hour batfle beneath a hot sun, Latona's superior court tactics prevailed over those of the C. C. N. Y. net captain's to the extent of 7—5, 5—7, 6—1, 7—5.

After trailing at the end of a 5—2, 30-40 score at the end of the first set, Latona found his stride, and his backhand, which up to then had failed to work, began to click. He captured the next five games to take the first set. The second chapter went to Freedman but his strenuous efforts took their toll, for he fell an easy victim to Latona's steady stroking in the next two sets.

Welsh Extended to Win.

Barnard Welsh, Washington tiltist, seeded No. 5, outfinessed Leo Gould, of Detroit, 7—5, 6—1, 7—5. Welsh found his customary style of driving play ineffective against the thick shots of the Motor City entrant and it was only after "Barney" resorted to lobs and slices that he was able to make progress in the match which led him into the quarter-final round.

Frank Shore, Washington's third singles representative, fell before the fast-driving William Lurie, of Manhattan, by the score of 4—6, 6—0, 6—4, 6—1. Shore, national junior indoor champion in 1929, captured the first set, but failed to make any impression on the small, dark New Yorker thereafter.

Washington's final woman singles contestant was eliminated when Mrs. Charles P. Stone, seeded No. 3 and considered one of the favorites in the tourney, was upset by Miss Edna Smith, unranked Cleveland player, 8—6, 6—2.

Shore and Latona, seeded No. 3, in the doubles division, swept aside the Kenmore, N. Y., entrants, Louis Schaefer and Gerald Goldman, 6—1, 6—3, 6—2, 6—2. The Washington women's doubles team of Mrs. Stone and Frances Walker drew a first-round bye.

Whitehill Hurls Nats to 5-1 Win

Combs, Sewell and Ruth got that run back for the Yanks quickly, Combs and Sewell with singles, and Ruth by hitting into a double-play that permitted Combs to score.

Two runs crept up and socked Allen in the fourth just when it seemed that the Nats were through for the inning. But Whitehill, who cares as much for his batting average as his pitching average, looped a single into left field and set the stage for Buddy Myer.

Myer popped a high foul back of the plate and left the batter's box in disgust when Dickey made the catch near the screen, but no. Hizzoner Umpire Bill McGowan ruled that the ball had struck the screen before it plopped into Dickey's glove. And would Mr. Myer mind going back to the plate again and taking another swipe?

It was o. k. with Buddy, this reprieve from a sad fate. So he took Allen's next pitch and bunted it on a straight line 4 feet over Babe Ruth's head into the Babe's own bleachers for a home run and scored behind Whitehill while the 20,000 booed Myer, McGowan and anybody else who was handy.

Manush Finally Connects.

A half dozen foul balls preceded Manush's home run, in the eighth, but when he finally connected, he socked the mightiest clout of the series thus far, half way up in the bleachers to give the Nats their fifth run.

So much for the Washington batting attack. The New York offensive provided very little to write about, what with Whitehill getting rid of Crosetti and Allen after Dickey had tripled with one out in the fifth. After that, Earl gave them no more hits for three innings and went into the ninth with his 5-to-1 lead.

Joey Sewell, the perennial troublemaker, led off the ninth with a base on balls and with the big guns of the Yankee attack on hand, it looked like the making of an old-fashioned New York rally, but the obliging Ruth hit into a double play started by Buddy Myer, and Cronin's throw to Kuhel caught the slow-footed Babe at first by 10 feet.

With two out in the ninth, Gehrig singled and may still be waiting on first base for all I know.

Playground Field Day Draws 300 at Johnson

Over 300 children attended a field day at the Johnson Playground yesterday, the feature of which was a 30-minute draw wrestling match between Myer Endell and Leslie Lear. Both the running broad and the running high jumps were won by Dillon in the track meet. The Albert Stars defeated the Johnson Playground volley ball team, 42-30, the Fox Flashes won a basketball game 13-9 from the Albert Stars and the Savoy baseball team beat the Ben Hundleys nine, 17-5, in other events.

Pegler, in Role of Tennis Star, Would Die for Old Amateurism

By Westbrook Pegler.

NEW YORK, Aug. 7 (Spl.).—I am a high-ranking amateur tennis player, who shall be anonymous, and I have been wondering whether I and my wife ought to turn professional, but I have decided that we should not do so because I think by doing so would be to seriously degrade the ideal of amateurism in sport and set a bad example for the young players who might be influenced by this example to place monetary gain above the ideal of true sportsmanship and become veritable tennis bums.

My wife is a very good player herself, and she feels the same as I do about the proposition, as she does not wish to be placed on a level with Babe Ruth and other strictly commercial athletes, whereas, we are now welcomed at the most exclusive homes and clubs, and do not have to bother about commercial details such as living expenses.

Furthermore, by association with the socially exclusive millionaires in Newport, Southampton and Seabright I figure to sell enough insurance to retain my self-respect as a sportsman playing the game for the sake of the sport alone. When the depression is over I figure to also sell enough real estate and bonds to make me independent of commercialism and become a leader of the exclusive society bon ton myself.

Newspaper Work Helps.

I figure by my writing up newspaper reports of the tennis tournaments which I and my wife take part in, that I will also make a good income on the side without exploiting my tennis fame, as I have always wanted to write and I think writing is a gift that if you have it "in" you then you will be a success at the literature "game." If I win the men's national a couple of years and also the Wimbledon then I figure to write my life story for some big magazine, and I think this experience of winning the highest titular baubles in the "realm of the racquet" will improve my writing ability and naturally I will be able to command a higher price for my write-up of my life, also my wife's. I think winning a major championship is a great education and it also develops a person's literary style so that they are much "sought after" by editors, whereas if you do not win any championships one is likely not to develop their "gift" for writing.

And Then Came the War.

One year, just after I was wounded by "Cupid's dart" and got wedded, the tennis people were figuring on trying to, if possible, get the Chinese and the Australians and the Italian tennis people to send over their teams for the big Eastern tournaments around New York and Philadelphia, as this international "flavor" would enhance much to the success of the tournaments. The Chinese, the Australians and the Italian people replied that they would be willing to gladly comply with this sporting invitation and send over their best players if the Americans would first send over a mixed team to sound the international "flavor" in their tournaments and thus help to raise enough money to pay the expenses of sending their players to the United States.

Our people tried a number of our players but were meeting with "scant success" as so many of the Americans are commercially inclined and placed monetary gain above the ideal of pure sportsmanship by preferring to stick to their jobs. I and my wife leaped into the breach, however, and I quit my job as contact man for a sporting goods concern as we were willing to make personal sacifices for the good of the sportsmanship ideal.

That fall we sailed from San Francisco in September and played tournaments all over the Orient until winter and then down to Australia for more months of missionary work spreading the gospel of unselfish sportsmanship everywhere we went for nothing but our expenses. It is hard to keep track of one's expenses when they are constantly on the go with a case of tip, tip, tip all the time and naturally having to buy an occasional round of refreshments for people in a foreign land who have been treating one with lavish hospitality, so I hit upon a convenient plan of just computing my expenses as a certain per cent of the gross receipts, for convenience to avoid the bothersome details of bookkeeping. We traveled first class, of course, as to not do so would be a bad precedent as it might give the public a poor impression of the social caliber of the people who "go in for" tennis "in a big way" and we always strove to "keep our end up" wherever we were by constantly keeping a chartered limousine at our disposal to prevent people from getting an idea that tennis players are of the poorer classes socially.

Just Travel, Travel.

After Australia we went to New Zealand for a few tournaments and from there we gradually played our way to Italy and then up to the Riviera and Wimbledon and the big French tournaments and home.

I have always been fond of drawing as well as writing and I added to my legitimate income on the tour by drawing some little sketches which I sold to various wealthy art patrons connected with clubs which were running tournaments, receiving $200 each for some of the sketches and received a great compliment from a noted world-renowned art critic who wrote that they were very extraordinary indeed.

So I am convinced that in holding up the highest ideals of amateurism I and my wife are doing the right thing which posterity will approve and I will always be able to look the world in the eye as a sportsman setting a respectable example to the younger players not to become tennis bums and exploit sport for sordid gain.

Next in line were Sarazen, with rounds of 68-72 and the veteran, Willie Klein, of New York, at 140.

Al Houghton, of Washington, D. C., played 17 holes in par golf after taking a 6 on the first hole of his morning round. In the afternoon the District professional conquered his stumbling block of the morning round—the first—with a birdie 3, and toured the final 18 holes in a par-wrecking 69, giving him a total of 141, 1 over par, and easily qualifying him for match play.

Houghton's card:

Morning Round.

Out .....6 4 4 3 4 4 4 2 4—35
In .....4 5 5 4 4 3 3 5 4—37—72

Afternoon Round.

In .....4 5 3 4 5 4 2 4 3—69—141

Other low scorers were Al Houghton, Washington, D. C., 72-69—141; Paul Runyan, White Plains, N. Y., 71-70—141; Ghezzie, with 68-73—141; Tom Creavy, of Albany, N. Y., 1931 champion, 74-68—142, and Frank Walsh, 1932 finalist, who wound up with rounds of 73-69—142.

Leo Diegel, of Grosse Point, Mich., two times national prochampion, was well up among the leaders with 72-71—143, as were Curley, who slumped to a 75 after his first round of 68, Horton Smith, Johnny Farrell, Harry Cooper, Ed Dudley and Bobby Cruickshank, who also had 143's.

Dutra and Hines will meet in a 18-hole playoff for the medal probably next Sunday, unless either one enters the finals.

After Australia we went to New Zealand for a few tournaments and from there we gradually played our way to Italy and then up to the Riviera and Wimbledon and the big French tournaments and home.

I have always been fond of drawing as well as writing and I added to my legitimate income on the tour by drawing some little sketches which I sold to various wealthy art patrons connected with clubs which were running tournaments, receiving $200 each for some of the sketches and received a great compliment from a noted world-renowned art critic who wrote that they were very extraordinary indeed.

So I am convinced that in holding up the highest ideals of amateurism I and my wife are doing the right thing which posterity will approve and I will always be able to look the world in the eye as a sportsman setting a respectable example to the younger players not to become tennis bums and exploit sport for sordid gain.

Voigt, Lynch and McCarthy Qualify

George Voigt and Maurice McCarthy, nationally known golfers, both of whom formerly played under a District of Columbia banner, were among the successful qualifiers in yesterday's Nation-wide competition for 165 places in the National Amateur championship slated September 11-16 at Cincinnati.

Voigt, regestered from the Winged Foot Club, New York, scored rounds of 77—79 for a 156 total to qualify at Bronxville, N. Y., while McCarthy, with 155, was one of seven who made the grade in the trials at Cleveland, Ohio.

Hunt Advances In Junior Net Title Play

District Boy Rallies After Foe Loses Set Point to Enter 4th Round.

CULVER, Ind., Aug. 8 (AP).—Two stars fell by the wayside and several others had narrow escapes in advanced rounds of play for the national junior and boys tennis championships here today.

Frank Rericha, New York, one of the strongest contenders for the junior title, was eliminated by Russell Ball, El Paso, 2—6, 6—3, 8—6, in one upset.

William Fay, of Pittsburgh, considered a real threat in the boys competition, fell before the stroking of Seymour Greenburg, Chicago, a little fellow who is beginning to make players and gallery alike watch him galavant on the courts. The score was 4—6, 6—1, 6—4.

While the other favorites moved easily into the fourth round of the junior championship, Jay Cohn, Chicago, and Gilbert Hunt, Washington, had to come from behind to defeat George Dullnig, of San Antonio, and Dick Dunlop, of Paris, Tenn., respectively.

Hunt Rallies to Win.

Cohn's superior service and work at the net finally carried him to victory, 7—5, 7—5, after being behind in each set. Hunt's net work was the deciding factor in his win over Dunlop, 6—2, 6—3, 8—6, after the latter had him within a point of defeat in the third set.

Two Policemen Held on Charge Of Beating Man

Warrants Are Issued After Inquiry Into Prisoner's Accusations.

Warrants charging Policemen Frank Ashley and Charles C. Williams, of the Second Precinct, with assaulting a prisoner, were issued late yesterday by Assistant United States Attorney Milford F. Schwartz.

The policemen are charged with having used their clubs and fists on George Mahoney, 19, colored, who was arrested Sunday for housebreaking.

The warrants were signed by Judge Isaac R. Hitt after Schwartz investigated Mahoney's charges that he had been beaten. Physicians at Freedmen's Hospital, where the prisoner was taken, reported, Schwartz said, that Mahoney had a bump on his head and abrasions on his wrists.

Both Ordered Suspended.

On orders from Inspector L. I. H. Edwards, both policemen were suspended. When the warrants were served, they immediately obtained bond. They were released in bail of $500 each.

Inspector Thaddeus R. Bean, who suspended the policemen, said Mahoney apparently had become hysterical when questioned and screamed without reason. Inspector Edwards, however, said a thorough investigation would be made by the department to ascertain the truthfulness of the charges.

Third Brutality Case.

The Mahoney case was the third involving alleged third-degree brutality within 10 days.

Detectives Joseph W. Shimon and William V. Christian, of the Third Precinct, were charged with beating two prisoners who were also taken into custody on housebreaking charges.

The charges against them will be heard by the Police Trial Board, which meets at 10 a. m. today in the First Precinct station house.

Street Condemnation Cases Are Dismissed

Dropping of three condemnation cases pending in District Supreme Court was ordered yesterday by the District Commissioners because of the lack of funds to carry forward street projects.

Upon recommendation of Surveyor Melvin C. Hazen, the commissioners withdrew cases involving the extension of Kansas avenue, North Dakota avenue, Quackenbos and Oglethorpe streets, the widening of Ordway street and the extension of Tewkesbury place. Twenty-one other cases on the court docket were continued.

Helen Cooley's Death Declared Accidental

A certificate of accidental death was issued by Acting Coroner MacDonald yesterday in the case of Mrs. Helen Cooley, 35, found unconscious last Wednesday in her room at 1114 Eleventh street northwest.

Mrs. Cooley was found lying near a radiator, suffering from a head injury. She died in Emergency Hospital. Walter F. Kelley, 50, occupant of another room in the house, was held for investigation, but released.

French Veterans Welcomed Tonight

Ninety on Way Here to Return Legion's Visit to Paris in 1927.

"Parley vous" will fly thick and fast this midweek, what with 90 French war veterans in Washington to return the American Legion's visit to Paris six years ago.

Ninety members of the Association des Mutiles et Anciens Combatants will arrive at Union Station at 7:45 tonight. A squadron of motorcycle policemen will escort them to the Wardman Park Hotel.

Tomorrow at 10 a. m. the group will place a wreath on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier. A reception will be given in their honor at 4:30 in the afternoon.

The veterans, who disembarked at New York Sunday, will visit Mount Vernon Friday. Some of them will continue to Chicago for a sight-seeing tour and the remainder will return to New York immediately and sail for France Friday.

Col. John Thomas Taylor and Lieut. Darrell Preston Aub are in charge of the group's visit to Washington.

Masked Man Holds Up Fruit Vender, Gets $10

The masked robber, who has been preying on fruit venders during early morning hours, appeared again yesterday and held up an employe of a fruit stand at Eleventh and Water streets southwest.

The employe, Vanness Chappel, of 908 G street southwest, reported to police that a colored man wearing a handkerchief over the lower part of his face approached him about 4 a. m., and at the point of a gun took $10 from the cash register.

Hamilton Now Colonel In Organized Reserves

Promotion to the rank of colonel, Organized Reserves, was received yesterday from the War Department by Lieut. Col. West A. Hamilton, 413 T street northwest.

Col. Benjamin O. Davis, Regular Army, and Col. Spencer Dickerson, Illinois National Guard, are the only other colored officers now holding this rank. Col. Hamilton served overseas as captain, Company C, 372d Infantry, Ninety-second Division, and has been with the 428th Reserve Infantry since 1925.

120-Degree Heat Doesn't Worry Crocodile That Came to Capital Zoo From Germany

Vine Snake Has Poison Deadly to Animals But Not Man.

The thermometer in the reptile house at the National Zoological Park showed 120 degrees, but the broad-nosed crocodile, part of the "surprise package" received by Dr. William Mann from Berlin, Germany, yesterday, didn't seem to mind.

The crocodile comes from South Africa. He is about 2 feet long, homely looking. He is vicious, willing to eat anything from pieces of fish to the hand of the keeper who cleans his cage.

The vine snake, another of the newcomers, is about 5 feet long, green, and spends the greater part of his time in treetops catching lizzards. He has two large teeth, especially adapted to holding a lizzard while he eats it. He has a poison deadly to animals.

"This poison is not harmful to man," said Dr. Mann.

Others in the shipment include two cameleons, three spine lizzards and several boas.

Casualties in the reptile house are almost nonexistant. Other than a bruised shin or two received from entering the cages, no one has ever been injured while working there.

Ft. Humphreys Seeking Aid in Beautification

Fine Arts Commission in Capital Has Passed on General Plan.

Availing themselves of all possible aid in an attempt to beautify Fort Humphreys, officials at the Army post have asked the Fine Arts Commission to aid in the preparation of landscape plans for the fort.

H. P. Caemmerer, secretary to the commission, said yesterday that Maj. Gilmore D. Clark was already at work on the plans for Fort Humphreys. Maj. Clark is the landscape architect member of the commission.

The commission has approved the general plan for improvements at the fort. This plan included new buildings and new roads. The commission also approved the plan for the reconstruction of Belvoir, an historic mansion which stood on the grounds.

The Fort Humphreys project is not the first Army construction program to be submitted to the commission. It also advised in the improvement program at the War College, Mr. Caemmerer said.

Aid in the preparation of landscape plans was requested by Col. Edward H. Schulz, commandant of the engineer school at the fort. Lanscaping was asked for the regimental headquarters building, the company barracks, a pond on the grounds of the fort, the outer gate to the fort, and the road between the inner and outer gates.

Legion Parade Tonight Will Open Convention

The procession will form at Fourteenth and K streets at 7:15 p. m. and will proceed up Fourteenth to Central High School, where the conclave will be conducted. Commander Norman B. Landreau will open the convention with an address at 8:15 p. m. The meeting will continue through Friday.

Court Refuses To Hear Action On Union Fight

A legal technicality prevented James Price from obtaining aid in District Supreme Court yesterday. His suit claimed that members of a local union were blocking his employment as an elevator construction worker.

In dismissing the suit, Justice Joseph W. Cox held that Price failed to allege that he had complained to the international union heads and thus has not exhausted his out-of-court remedies. He was given ten days in which to renew his suit.

Price, who lives at 1601 Benning road northeast, had asked the court to restrain Frank Glick, John Herrietty and Elmar Ewald, officers of Washington Local, No. 10, International Union of Elevator Constructors, Operators and Starters, from interfering in his employment.

He declared that for the 15 years he has been a member of the international union, that he has had several jobs in Washington, and that each time union officials told his employer that they would call a strike unless he was discharged.

Forest Camps Oust 18 of 500 From District

Ten Discharged at Front Royal; One Rejected as Habitually Drunk.

Eighteen men of the District's quota of 500 recruits in the reforestation army have been discharged from camps in Virginia, according to reports made by the camp commanders.

Nine of the men were discharged for being absent without leave, three for refusal to work and three for breaking rules. One man was discharged for habitual drunkenness, while the cause of discharge was not given in two cases.

Most of the men were sent away from the camp at Front Royal, which lost ten recruits. The worker discharged for drunkenness was stationed at the veterans' camp in West Point. At this camp a Tennessee man was discharged for threatening the first sergeant with a knife.

A study of the reports shows the difficulties faced by camp commanders in many cases. From the North River Gap Camp, it was reported, "the village of Stokesville, 7 miles from camp, was placed off limits because of liquor trouble."

The commander of a colored company at Konnarock reported "a strong hostile sentiment on arrival by native whites." The officer in charge of a company recruited in the steel mills district of Pennsylvania said: "Seven rattlesnakes killed in camp. It is believed that due to increased activity in the steel mills some men won't return to duty after leave."

Release of Water, Gas Fund Urged

Gotwals and Donovan to Call on Douglas in District's Behalf.

Budget Director Douglas again will be urged this week to release the District's gasoline tax and water rent funds, appropriated by Congress, by District officials and Senator King, chairman of the Senate District Committee.

Engineer Commissioner Gotwals and Auditor Donovan will call on the budget director. Senator King already has made one visit in behalf of the District.

Several hundred jobs and the use of more than $2,000,000, besides improvements to municipal highways and the water systems, are dependent upon favorable action by the Budget Bureau.

Victim's Car Stripped After Boulevard Crash

Charles Kessler, 24, who suffered a possible skull fracture in a highway crash early yesterday, is at Emergency Hospital in an undetermined condition. He lives at 812 Sixth street northwest, according to park police.

The man was found on Mount Vernon Memorial Highway lying face down on a lawn near the railroad bridge. His demolished roadster rested against a wrecked light pole 100 feet away. After removing him to the hospital, Sergt. W. F. Shelton and Private A. J. Bickford returned to the scene and discovered two front wheels of his automobile had been stolen.

Noted Lawyer Flies Here to Help Gangster

Frank McDonald to Try to Halt Extradition of Zimmerman.

A desperate effort to save Frank Zimmerman, Chicago gangster, from extradition to Illinois, will be made today by Frank McDonald, famous Chicago criminal lawyer, who flew here last night to represent Zimmerman at a hearing before District Supreme Court Justice Joseph W. Cox.

McDonald's trip here was disclosed early today by Sheriff E. J. Welter, of La Salle County, Ill., here to return Zimmerman to Illinois, where he is wanted for the $52,000 robbery of the Streator Union National Bank.

Extradition papers for Zimmerman, who was arrested in Washington a week ago by local detectives, were granted Monday by Judge Cox, but application for a writ of habeas corpus by his attorney, Charles Ford, held up removal of the fugitive to Illinois.

McDonald will attempt to break down testimony of Alex Brown, one of the participants in the bank robbery, on parole after turning State's evidence, according to Sheriff Welter.

Zimmerman has been under heavy guard since his apprehension here, authorities fearing an attempt to free him.

Welter and two deputies arrived here last week with an armored car mounting three machine guns, in which they plan to take Zimmerman back for trial if he is extradited.

Veterans Sponsor Fair Horse Show

More than 75 ribbons and 20 large silver trophies and cups will be awarded to winners in the horse show event of National City Fair, in Benning, the week of September 3, under auspices of the Police and Fire Post Veterans of Foreign Wars.

The horse show will be held for five hours on September 6. It is only one of the numerous events planned for the seven days and will consist of 20 divisions.

Every third division will be for junior contestants, and the horse and pony entries will be ridden by youths 14 to 16 years old, inclusive.

The fair is being arranged as a charity venture. At least 300 individual attractions will comprise the daily program. Fireworks day and night, and array of Governmental, civic and commercial exhibits, and many free circus and vaudeville acts are a few of the features. Headquarters have been opened in the Albee Building, Fifteenth and G streets northwest.

Boy on "Buffalo Hunt" Takes Mother's $25

Mrs. Mary McGowan reported that after reading Western stories her son announced his intention of becoming a cowboy and disappeared early yesterday. She appealed to No. 6 Precinct police. The boy took a cash box with $25 and valuable papers, she said.

Seventh Day Adventists Will Study Code Today

Seventh Day Adventists representatives from Takoma Park General Conference were to confer at La Grange, Ill., today with delegates from educational institutions of the denomination.

The meeting will outline a code governing industrial enterprises conducted by the institutions for students working their way through school. Rev. J. L. Shaw, treasurer of the General Conference will preside.

Fall Off Truck Badly Hurts Boy.

Joseph Weekly, aged 8, of 3410 Georgia avenue northwest, was severely injured when he fell from the back of a truck yesterday afternoon. He was carried to Emergency Hospital where he was treated for bruises and lacerations about the head and body.

Bottom Price

Who wants a 65-foot boat, somewhat damaged and loaded with oyster shell, now resting on the bottom of the Potomac?

He can send a bid for it to the United States engineer office. Bids will be opened this afternoon.

The boat for sale is the J. J. Underhill, an Eastern Shore bugeye, which sank in the channel several months ago.

The sale provides the Underhill must be moved within 60 days, and a bond of $200 must be posted to make sure it does not again become a menace to navigation.

Idle Still Storm Home Loan Office

Job hunters still are bothering Charles A. Jones, manager of the District Home Owners Loan Corporation, despite his announcement that he doesn't want to see them.

Except for two per diem employes, the office continues to be manned by a volunteer staff. This force will be continued until further announcement, Mr. Jones said. He added that if job seekers persist in worrying him he may appoint a sergeant at arms—from his volunteer force.

The District Council of Building and Loan Associations will meet at noon today at the Raleigh Hotel to discuss the attitude of national bank examiners toward the nonguaranteed bonds of the Federal Home Owners Loan Corporation as assets of financial institutions under their jurisdiction.

Jewelry Thieves Get $700 in Loot

Two Stores and Residence Are Robbed of Rings and Watches.

Shortly after the Kay Jewelry Co., 409 Seventh street northwest, was opened for business it was discovered that five rings valued at $125 were missing from a tray in a showcase.

Mrs. Edna Dimitry, 718 Eighteenth street northwest, reported to police that two rings valued at $300 had been stolen from her home.

Plans to Be Drawn For Calvert Bridge

Plans for the new Calvert Street Bridge were considered yesterday when Clement B. Chase, of the Philadelphia engineering firm of Modjeski, Masters & Chase, conferred with Engineer Commissioner John C. Gotwals and Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways.

Maj. Gotwals said that no definite arrangement had been consummated, but it was understood that the firm agreed to submit a preliminary design of a multiple arch masonry span in accordance with the wishes of the Fine Arts Commission.

As the District has no money available to pay for the design, it is expected that the engineers will not be paid until the design is accepted by the Commissioners, approved by the Fine Arts Commission and the necessary fund appropriated by Congress.

Lange Is Freed By Maryland In Jett Killing

Other Witnesses Also Are Released; Accident Theory Believed.

All witnesses in the death of William L. Jett, killed July 31 by a Glen Echo street car, were released yesterday by State's Attorney Stedman Prescott, of Montgomery County. Raymond Lange, at whose cottage Jett was visiting before his death and who has been held several days in the Rockville Jail, also was released.

The witnesses were questioned for more than four hours by Mr. Prescott, who announced at the end of the questioning that he had found no evidence which would warrant further detention of Lange and that the testimony indicated that the death had been accidental.

Dr. George L. Lewis, of Rockville, acting as coroner, testified that Jett was alive when he was struck by the street car. He based his opinion on the fact that Jett's leg was burned and blistered whereas it would have been bruised had he been dead when struck and that his lungs were full of blood, indicating that he was alive when struck. The weight of the street car seared the veins and arteries of the neck, in Dr. Lewis' belief.

Dr. Lewis said that Jett had been drinking alcohol two or three hours before his death.

Two brothers of Jett, Earl and Charles, were closeted with Mr. Prescott for some time after the witness questioning. They were quoted as being satisfied with the activities of the police after the entire case had been explained in detail to them.

Several angles still are to be checked in the affair, however. One of the most important is the fact that Jett's wallet was missing when he was picked up from the street car tracks. Detective Theodore Vollten is working on this angle. Mr. Prescott and Chief of Police Alvie A. Moxley declared that any further evidence dug up will result in rearrest and questioning of the witnesses, although they are fairly well satisfied that the affair was accidental.
